APICS Certified Supply Chain Professional Sample Questions (Q473-Q478):

NEW QUESTION # 473
Which of the following activities is critical to successful synchronization of supply and demand throughout a supply chain?

- A. Maintaining increased inventories
- B. Sharing demand information
- C. Placing large orders to obtain lower prices
- D. Reducing the number of deliveries

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 474

A key to increasing supply chain management integration is to:

- A. incorporate enterprise resources planning (ERP).
- B. have critical component suppliers share in strategy implementation.
- C. push demand throughout the supply chain.
- D. utilize warehouse management systems (WMS).

Answer: B

Explanation:
Increasing supply chain management integration involves fostering close collaboration with key suppliers, particularly those providing critical components. By engaging these suppliers in the strategic planning and implementation process, companies can ensure alignment of objectives, enhance coordination, and improve overall supply chain performance. This integration leads to better communication, joint problem-solving, and innovation, ultimately resulting in a more resilient and efficient supply chain. While ERP and WMS systems are tools that facilitate integration, the core of successful integration lies in strategic collaboration and partnership.References

NEW QUESTION # 475
What is the primary benefit of using a central storage warehouse for all components rather than using point-of-use storage?

- A. Reduced need for bar codes and radio frequency identification technology
- B. Maintain a cleaner shop floor
- C. Ease of control and count accuracy
- D. Reduced material handling costs

Answer: C

Explanation:
The primary benefit of using a central storage warehouse for all components rather than point-of-use storage is the ease of control and count accuracy. Central storage allows for more efficient inventory management, as all components are stored in a single, controlled location. This centralization simplifies inventory tracking, reduces errors, and improves count accuracy because inventory can be managed and monitored consistently.
Additionally, central storage can facilitate better inventory optimization and forecasting.References:

NEW QUESTION # 476
When lead time is short and demand is known for a product group, what type of supply chain strategy is best to implement?

- A. Continuous replenishment
- B. Theory of constraints (TOC)
- C. Batch production
- D. Matching demand with capacity

Answer: A

Explanation:
When lead time is short and demand is known for a product group, the best type of supply chain strategy to implement is continuous replenishment. Continuous replenishment is a supply chain strategy that aims to maintain optimal inventory levels by replenishing products or materials as they are consumed or sold1. It is based on the principle of pull-based production, where demand triggers supply, rather than push-based production, where supply anticipates demand2. Continuous replenishment can reduce lead time by eliminating the need for large and infrequent orders, minimizing inventory holding costs, improving customer service levels, and increasing responsiveness to demand fluctuations34. The other options are not as suitable for the given scenario. Matching demand with capacity is a supply chain strategy that aims to balance the supply and demand of products or services by adjusting the production capacity or the demand level5. It can reduce lead time by avoiding overproduction or underproduction, but it may not be feasible or cost-effective when demand is highly variable or uncertain. Theory of constraints (TOC) is a management philosophy that focuses on identifying and eliminating the bottlenecks or constraints that limit the performance of a system. It can reduce lead time by improving the throughput and efficiency of the system, but it may not address the root causes of lead time variability or uncertainty. Batch production is a production method that involves producing a set of identical products or materials in batches or lots. It can reduce lead time by achieving economies of scale and reducing setup costs, but it may also increase inventory levels, waste, and quality issues.

NEW QUESTION # 477
Which of the following benefits should a supplier expect to receive by becoming a certified supplier?

- A. Increase in access to competitive information
- B. Reduction in redundant processes with buyer
- C. Increase in price of items sold
- D. Reduction in number of items utilizing vendor-managed inventory (VMI)

Answer: B
