NEW QUESTION # 24

Which of the following are the three primary features of the Canadian Constitution?

- A. The division of labour, the creation of laws, and the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms
- B. The creation of the federal, provincial, and municipal laws and legislation
- C. The division of powers, the creation of the courts, and the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms
- D. The creation of statute law, tort law, and contract law

Answer: C

Explanation:

The Canadian Constitution is the supreme law of Canada, providing the foundational legal framework upon which all other laws (including the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act) are built. It is primarily composed of the Constitution Act, 1867, and the Constitution Act, 1982. Its three most defining primary features are: 1) The Division of Powers (Sections 91 and 92), which strictly divides legislative authority between the Federal government (e.g., criminal law, national defense) and the Provincial governments (e.g., property, civil rights, and the regulation of professions like engineering).

2) The Creation of the Courts, establishing the judicial framework (like the Supreme Court of Canada) required to interpret laws and resolve disputes. 3) The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (added in 1982), which guarantees fundamental rights and freedoms to all Canadians (like freedom of expression and equality rights) and limits the power of the government to infringe upon them. Options A, B, and C contain incorrect legal classifications or administrative concepts not explicitly foundational to the constitutional text.

NEW QUESTION # 25

How many public members are required on the ASET Council?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 10% of Council

Answer: B

Explanation:

The governance structure of professional regulatory organizations in Alberta is strictly dictated by the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act (EGPA). To ensure that self-regulating professions do not become insular and continuously act in the best interests of the public rather than just their members, the legislation mandates the inclusion of public representation on the governing councils. For ASET, the EGPA specifically requires that the ASET Council include not fewer than 3 members of the public.

These public members are appointed directly by the provincial government (typically the Minister responsible for the Act), rather than being elected by the ASET membership. Their primary role is to provide an external, non-technical perspective and to ensure that the Council's decisions regarding registration, discipline, and professional standards remain transparent and firmly aligned with the protection of public welfare. This mandated presence of three public members is a critical cornerstone of the social contract that grants self-regulatory privileges to professions like engineering and applied science technology.

NEW QUESTION # 26

Which of the following statements describes the role of a professional regulatory organization?

- A. To set the qualifications for admission into the profession
- B. To coordinate licensing policies and procedures between organizations
- C. To seek employment opportunities for members of the profession
- D. To publish relevant information about the profession

Answer: A

Explanation:

The primary role of a Professional Regulatory Organization (PRO) like ASET is established by provincial legislation (the EGPA) to protect the public. To achieve this mandate, the most fundamental function of a PRO is to set, maintain, and enforce the qualifications for admission into the profession.

This involves evaluating academic credentials, assessing practical work experience, administering professional practice examinations, and ensuring applicants have good character. By acting as the gatekeeper, the PRO ensures that only competent, qualified individuals are legally permitted to use protected titles and practice engineering technology independently. While PROs may occasionally publish relevant information or coordinate with other bodies, these are secondary functions. Crucially, a PRO is not a union or an advocacy group; its purpose is not to seek employment opportunities, negotiate wages, or protect the financial interests of its members (Option C). Its overriding duty is regulatory—ensuring the competency of its practitioners to safeguard public welfare.

NEW QUESTION # 27

A regulated member receives tickets to a sports event from a client who is bidding on a project for the member's organization. The client assures the member that the tickets are a gift for their long-standing relationship and are not related to the current bidding process. Which of the following actions should the member take?

- A. Return the tickets.
- B. Report the client's actions to ASET.
- C. Speak with the employer before deciding whether to accept or return the tickets.
- D. Accept the tickets.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The ASET Code of Ethics requires members to act with absolute integrity and to avoid any situations that create a conflict of interest, whether actual or perceived. In the context of procurement and contract bidding, maintaining strict objectivity is critical. Accepting a gift of significant value (like sports tickets) from an active bidder completely compromises that objectivity. Even if the client insists the gift is purely for a "long-standing relationship" and the member believes they will not be influenced, the perception of bias to other bidders, the employer, and the public is highly damaging. It creates an appearance of bribery or favoritism. The ethical obligation here is clear and immediate: the member must politely but firmly return the tickets, citing their professional ethical obligations and corporate procurement policies regarding active bidding periods. Speaking with the employer (Option D) is unnecessary as the ethical standard prohibits acceptance regardless of corporate leniency, and reporting to ASET (Option C) is generally an overreaction unless it was an explicit, aggressive bribe.

NEW QUESTION # 28

A regulated member of ASET is approached by a friend, whose small engineering company requires some programming work. Although the regulated member's company does this type of work, the friend advises that the company's rates are too high and asks the regulated member to personally complete the work for a reduced fee. Which of the following statements best describes what action(s) the member should take in this circumstance?

- A. Reject the offer but try to get a better rate from the company to carry out the friend's work.
- B. Reject the offer and notify the employer about the situation.
- C. Accept and carry out the work for the friend without a formal contract.
- D. Accept the offer but advise the friend that a contract will be required.

Answer: B

Explanation:

This scenario presents a clear and direct conflict of interest, as well as a breach of the ethical duty of fidelity to one's employer. By accepting "moonlighting" work that directly competes with the services offered by their primary employer, the member would be undermining their employer's business and potentially misusing skills or resources developed on company time. The ASET Code of Ethics mandates that members act with integrity towards their employers and strictly avoid conflicts of interest. Secretly undercutting the employer's rates to benefit a friend is highly unethical and violates the trust inherent in the employment contract. The member must firmly reject the offer to do the work privately. Furthermore, full transparency is required; the member should notify their employer about the situation. This disclosure protects the member from future allegations of misconduct and allows the employer to handle the business lead appropriately, perhaps by formally negotiating a lower rate through official company channels, thus keeping all professional activities ethical and above board.
