COMM 101 Study Guide – Test 1

Chapter 1

- Define communication
 - Messages, language, discourse
 - "How people talk"
 - The process of creating meaning through symbolic interaction
- Draw and label a transactional model of communication
 - Both sending and receiving are simultaneous, irreversible process
- Know the limitations of the linear model of communication
 - "Like giving an injection" a sender will encode ideas and feelings into some sort of message and then convey them to a receiver who decodes them
 - Introduces the model of noise
 - Takes into account different environments
 - Overemphasizes the way comm. works because it assumes the receiver is passive
- Know the different types of communication contexts
 - Face to face (pro: you can determine tone and truth easily. Con: have to be in the same room and this can take time and money)
 - phone call (pro: can communicate directly with one or more people. Con: you have to be focused and technical glitches such as poor sound quality can interfere)
 - Email (pro: you can reach a lot of people in a short time. Con: you can't always expect or deliver an immediate reply)
 - texting/instant messaging (pro: you can communicate with several people at once in real time. Con: you need to be focused and available to respond immediately)
 - Blogging (pro: you can reach a large audience and customize your message with photos/videos and media. Con: your posts can be ignored)
 - discussion forum (pro: can share thoughts and ideas and benefit from the wisdom of many. Con: your access and ability to share may be restricted)
 - Wikis (pro: you can collaborate with multiple people to create different types of content. Con: you have to have the time and skills to build the content)
 - Intrapersonal comm.: communicating with oneself
 - Ex: Listening to the little voice inside our heads
 - Dyadic/ interpersonal comm.: two people who interact is called a dyad. Can occur in person or via mediated channels
 - Most common type of comm.
 - Small group comm.: every person can participate actively with the other members
 - Organizational comm.: used when you need to collectively achieve goals. Specific roles will shape the way people communicate
 - Public comm.: a group becomes too large for all members to contribute
