Cisco Designing and Implementing Secure Cloud Access for Users and Endpoints Sample Questions (Q114-Q119):

NEW QUESTION # 114
The use of Cisco Secure Workload can facilitate:

- A. The complete removal of network security measures
- B. An increase in the manual workload for IT staff
- C. A decrease in the security of workloads
- D. The enforcement of granular security policies at the workload level

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 115
The primary goal of direct-internet-access policies for trusted business applications is to:

- A. Eliminate the need for any form of web security
- B. Isolate the business application from the internet
- C. Completely bypass all security measures for speed
- D. Balance security and performance by allowing direct access under strict security controls

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 116

Advanced app control mechanisms are essential for SaaS applications because they:

- A. Reduce the overall security posture by focusing only on user experience
- B. Allow all user actions without logging
- C. Enable granular control over app functionality and user actions
- D. Simplify compliance with data protection regulations

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 117

An administrator must deploy an endpoint posture policy for all users. The organization wants to have all endpoints checked against antimalware definitions and operating system updates and ensure that the correct Secure Client modules are installed properly. How must the administrator meet the requirements?

- A. Create the required posture policy within Cisco ISE, configure redirection on the NAD, and ensure that the client provisioning policy is correct.
- B. Configure the WLC to provide local posture services, and configure Cisco ISE to receive the compliance verification from the WLC to be used in an authorization policy.
- C. Identify the antimalware being used, create an endpoint script to ensure that it is updated, and send the update log to Cisco ISE for processing.
- D. Create an ASA Firewall posture policy, upload the Secure Client images to the NAD, and create a local client provisioning portal.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Cisco Identity Services Engine (ISE) is the central policy engine for posture assessments. As outlined in the SCAZT guide (Section 2: User and Device Security, Pages 39-44), to implement posture assessment and client provisioning correctly, an administrator must create posture policies within Cisco ISE and configure the Network Access Device (NAD)-such as a switch, WLC, or firewall-for redirection. This redirection sends the user to the posture portal, where ISE verifies the Secure Client modules (such as AnyConnect) and enforces compliance with antivirus signatures and OS updates.
ISE evaluates endpoint health based on pre-defined compliance rules and supports automatic remediation via the client provisioning portal. This ensures consistency and policy enforcement across distributed environments.
