NEW QUESTION # 615

Which of the following statements about ESG integration in credit ratings is most accurate?

- A. Rating providers tend to overcomplicate industry weighting and company alignment.
- B. There is a geographical bias toward companies in regions with high reporting standards.
- C. ESG factors do not affect an issuer's ability to convert assets into cash.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Credit rating agencies tend to favor companies in regions with high ESG reporting standards (Option C) because:

More disclosure leads to better ESG assessments, reducing uncertainty.

Companies in regions with weaker ESG regulations (e.g., emerging markets) may face higher credit risk due to limited transparency.

Option A is incorrect because ESG factors (e.g., climate risks) can impact liquidity and asset values.

Option B is incorrect because industry weighting in ESG integration follows standard credit risk methodologies.

NEW QUESTION # 617

A challenge for investors involved in collective engagement is to:

- A. increase the range of messages reaching the target company.
- B. prevent informal dialogue between individual fund managers' stewardship teams.
- C. avoid breaching rules regarding acting in concert.

Answer: C

Explanation:

One of the main challenges in collective engagement is ensuring compliance with legal and regulatory boundaries, particularly rules around "acting in concert" or market abuse regulations. Investors working together risk being seen as trying to influence control over a company, which can trigger regulatory scrutiny or require disclosures.

"Many investors see such market abuse rules as limiting their ability to carry out collective engagement effectively." Organizations like the Investor Forum in the UK have created frameworks to facilitate engagement without breaching these regulations, underscoring the seriousness of this issue.

NEW QUESTION # 618

Under the "shades of green" methodology developed by the Center for International Climate Research (CICERO), a bond that funds transition activities that do not lock in emissions is considered:

- A. Medium green
- B. Yellow
- C. Light green

Answer: C

Explanation:

CICERO's "Shades of Green" methodology classifies bonds based on their environmental impact. A bond that supports transition activities which do not lock in emissions, but contribute to a gradual transition to low-carbon operations, is considered "Light Green." This designation indicates that while the activities are beneficial, they may not yet be fully aligned with a low-carbon future. #### NEW QUESTION # 619

Which of the following statements about green bonds and sustainability-linked bonds (SLBs) is most accurate?

- A. Issuers of SLBs agree to pay a higher coupon to investors if they fail to achieve a sustainability-linked target
- B. A global consensus exists on the types of capital projects that fit in the scope of green bonds
- C. Green bonds allow issuers more flexibility in achieving sustainability targets compared to SLBs

Answer: A

Explanation:

Sustainability-linked bonds (SLBs) include a financial incentive for issuers to achieve specific sustainability targets. If the issuer fails to meet these targets, they agree to pay a higher coupon (interest rate) to investors, making the bonds more expensive and incentivizing issuers to fulfill their commitments.
