In which two cases would an automatic partial resynchronization occur between this target database's control file and the RMAN recovery catalog?

- A. When any control file metadata for archive log backups or image copies is now older than CONTROL_FILE_RECORD_KEEP_TIME.
- B. When the target is first registered.
- C. When any control file metadata for data file backups or image copies is now older than CONTROL_FILE_RECORD_KEEP_TIME.
- D. When a new data file is added to a tablespace in a registered target database.
- E. When a backup of the current SPFILE is created.

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

In a full resynchronization, RMAN updates all changed records, including those for the database schema. RMAN performs a full resynchronization after structural changes to database (adding or dropping database files, creating new incarnation, and so on) or after changes to the RMAN persistent configuration.

When a database is registered with a recovery catalog for the first time a full catalog synchronization is performed
