NEW QUESTION # 77

What is one issue that can occur without DevOps?

- A. Challenges between teams that build Solutions and those who operate the Solutions
- B. Challenges between teams that talk with customers daily and those that meet with customers for research
- C. Challenges between teams that design functionality and those that test the functionality
- D. Challenges between teams that deploy products and those that collect customer feedback

Answer: A

Explanation:

Without DevOps, organizations often face significant disconnects between development and operations teams. In traditional setups, developers build the software and then "hand it off" to operations teams for deployment and maintenance. This siloed approach creates delays, quality issues, and feedback gaps.

DevOps bridges this divide by integrating development and operations into a continuous delivery pipeline that promotes automation, collaboration, and shared responsibility for outcomes. SAFe emphasizes DevOps as a key enabler of the Continuous Delivery Pipeline, ensuring faster delivery of value, higher quality, and improved customer satisfaction.

From SAFe guidance:

"Without DevOps, organizations experience challenges between teams that build solutions and those who operate them. DevOps practices close this gap, fostering collaboration and accelerating the flow of value." Therefore, the correct answer is B. Challenges between teams that build Solutions and those who operate the Solutions.
