- A. The encryption keys are not provisled to the vendor.
- B. The vendor's data centers are in the same geographic region.
- C. Independent audits of the vendor's operations are regularly conducted.
- D. The vendor's controls are in line with the organization's security standards.

Answer: D

Explanation:
The most important thing to verify before entering into a relationship with a third party to host sensitive archived data is the vendor's controls are in line with the organization's security standards. This is because the organization is ultimately responsible for the security and privacy of its data, even if it is stored or processed by a third party. The organization should ensure that the vendor has adequate and effective controls to protect the data from unauthorized access, modification, disclosure, or destruction. The organization should also ensure that the vendor complies with the applicable laws and regulations regarding data protection, such as the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) in the European Union. The organization should conduct a thorough risk assessment of the vendor and its services, and establish a clear contract that defines the roles, responsibilities, expectations, and obligations of both parties.
