Cisco Certified Design Expert (CCDE) Written Exam Sample Questions (Q409-Q414):

NEW QUESTION # 409

Refer to the exhibit: A customer is migrating from a TDM-based Layer 2 VPN (L2VPN) to an MPLS Layer 3 VPN (L3VPN) in phases. The backbone OSPF connection between HUB A and HUB B will be replaced by eBGP. During the migration, some spokes (A2 and B1) are already moved to the L3VPN. The goal is to avoid routing loops during this hybrid transition. Which design choice helps prevent routing loops during the backbone link migration?

- A. Advertise low AD value for transit traffic on hub sites
- B. Redistribute EIGRP 200 and 300 with low cost into BGP
- C. Enable route filtering on OSPF backbone routers for spoke traffic
- D. OSPF backbone area advertises summarized routes to hub

Answer: C

Explanation:

Comprehensive Explanation:

* A: In hybrid WAN designs where routing domains are gradually migrating from OSPF to BGP, particularly with overlapping domains or redistribution points, loops can occur if the same routes are seen via multiple protocols (e.g., BGP and OSPF). Implementing route filtering on the OSPF backbone prevents it from learning and advertising spoke routes that it also receives via BGP-eliminating the loop scenario.

* B: Advertising a low administrative distance (AD) for transit traffic does not prevent loops and may worsen convergence or cause routing inconsistency.

* C: Summarizing OSPF routes may reduce the routing table size, but it does not solve the loop issue caused by dual protocol redistribution unless filtering is applied.

* D: Redistributing EIGRP routes into BGP with a low cost might cause preference toward one path but does not address the loop risk between the hybrid segments (OSPF and BGP).

This is a classic use case for route filtering in dual-protocol or dual-backbone migrations, where ensuring consistent path selection and loop prevention is essential.

NEW QUESTION # 410

What are two top cloud-native security challenges faced by today's cloud-oriented organizations?
(Choose two.)

- A. user credential validation
- B. lack of visibility and tracking
- C. establishing user roles
- D. increased attack surface
- E. polymorphism

Answer: B,D

NEW QUESTION # 411

A customer migrates from a traditional Layer 2 data center network into a new SDN-based spine-and-leaf VXLAN data center within the same location. Its applications cannot be readdressed and the customer does not want to perform the migration in a single operation. How should the legacy network and new network be connected?

- A. via a Layer 2 trunk and Layer 3 routed links to border leaf switches
- B. via Layer 3 links to border leaf switches
- C. via a Layer 2 trunk and Layer 3 routed links to spine switches
- D. via a Layer 2 trunk to border leaf switches

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 412

An investing Division of a financial services firm wants to improve its decision-making with the use of artificial intelligence and machine learning. The business must automate routine financial analysis processes, enhance its risk assessment models, and predict future Market trends.

- D. Improving the company's cybersecurity protocols and detecting any intrusions by using AI and ML.
- E. Using AI-powered platforms to tailor financial recommendations to individual customers according to their profiles.

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

The division wants automation of analysis, stronger risk models, and prediction of market trends:

- Anticipating financial and market trends with ML algorithms: Directly supports predicting future market behavior.

- Using ML models to supply decision-makers with real-time insights and automate regular financial analysis: Matches automation of routine analysis and providing real-time decision support.

Customer personalization and chatbots are useful AI use cases but do not directly meet the described needs.
