(On a CloudCampus virtualized campus network, service data enters different VNs from physical networks through edge nodes and the VN that the data will enter is determined by the VLANs to which users belong.

Which of the following statements about dynamic VLAN authorization is false?)

- A. When wired users pass MAC address authentication, they join the authorization VLANs delivered to edge nodes.
- B. When wireless users pass Portal authentication, they join the authorization VLANs delivered to edge nodes.
- C. When wireless users pass 802.1X authentication, they join the authorization VLANs delivered to edge nodes.
- D. When wired users pass 802.1X authentication, they join the authorization VLANs delivered to edge nodes.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed 200 to 250 words of Explanation From HCIP Datacom Campus Network documents knowledge without any URL or Links:

Dynamic VLAN authorization allows edge devices to dynamically assign users to specific VLANs based on authentication results. This mechanism is widely used to guide user traffic into the correct VN in a CloudCampus virtualized campus network.

For wired users, both MAC address authentication and 802.1X authentication support dynamic VLAN assignment. Once authentication succeeds, the authentication server delivers authorization VLAN information to the edge node, and users are placed into the corresponding VLANs. Therefore, statements C and D are correct.

For wireless users, 802.1X authentication also supports dynamic VLAN authorization, making statement B correct. However, Portal authentication for wireless users does not support dynamic VLAN assignment in CloudCampus networks. Wireless Portal authentication typically controls access rights rather than VLAN placement.

According to HCIP Datacom Campus Network documentation, statement A is false, making it the correct answer.
