NEW QUESTION # 153

Which two statements are benefits of YANG-push telemetry data over traditional data collection methods?

(Choose two.)

- A. You can precisely define data subscriptions.
- B. The subscription requests use less bandwidth than SNMP polls.
- C. It is supported on more devices than SNMP.
- D. It uses UDP rather than TCP.
- E. It scales better than SNMP.

Answer: B,E

Explanation:

YANG-push telemetry data offers several benefits over traditional data collection methods such as SNMP polling. One significant advantage is that it uses less bandwidth because it sends updates only when there's a change in subscribed data, rather than repeatedly polling all devices at regular intervals regardless of changes.

This makes it more efficient and reduces unnecessary network traffic. Additionally, YANG-push telemetry scales better than SNMP because it can handle more frequent updates from a large number of devices without overwhelming the network or management systems.
