Entity name	Description of entity

B	A large company whose shares are traded on a major stock exchange.
C	A small company whose shares are traded on a small company stock exchange and are owned by investors seeking maximum capital growth on their investment.
D	A small family-owned private company whose shareholders rely on their dividend income as their main source of income.

Which of these four entities is most likely to have a residual dividend policy?

- A. B
- B. A

NEW QUESTION # 269
A large multi-divisional company in the food processing and distribution business is conducting a strategic review. The divisions all compete in the same market.
The sale of one of its underperforming food processing divisions to the divisional management team is currently being considered.
The purchase by the divisional management team will require venture capital finance.

Which THREE of the following are likely to influence the multi-divisional company's decision on whether or not to sell the under-performing division to the management team?

- A. The divisional management team has detailed confidential information about the operation of the other divisions.
- B. The quality of the management team and its ability to manage the divested division successfully.
- C. The specific conditions imposed on the management team by the venture capital provider.
- D. The ability of the management team to raise the finance required to complete the purchase of the division at a reasonable price.
- E. The divisional management team has skills and experience that are important for the future successful operation of other divisions.

Answer: A,D,E

Explanation:
The seller will mainly care about:
Protecting the rest of the group - whether the sale would damage the remaining divisions.
Receiving an acceptable price - whether the MBO team can actually finance the deal.
Evaluate each option:
A: Confidential information about other divisions - If the team leaves and runs an independent business, they could use that confidential information against the remaining divisions. This clearly influences the parent's decision. # B: Skills/experience important to other divisions - If these managers are key to the success of other divisions, the parent may not want to lose them. This also directly affects the decision. # C: Ability to raise finance at a reasonable price - If the team cannot raise sufficient funds, or can only do so on terms that depress the price, the parent might not proceed. This is crucial to whether the sale can happen. # D: Ability to manage the divested division successfully - this matters more to the venture capitalist than to the selling company once the division is sold.
E: Conditions imposed by the venture capitalist - primarily a concern for the management team and VC, unless they somehow affect the sale price or parent's risk, which is not indicated here.
Correct answer: A, B and C.
