NEW QUESTION # 234
A developer created a new trigger that inserts a Task when a new Lead is created. After deploying to production, an outside integration chat reads task records is periodically reporting errors.
Which change should the developer make to ensure the integration is not affected with minimal impact to business logic?

- A. Remove the Apex class from the integration user's profile.
- B. Use a try-catch block after the insert statement.
- C. Use the Database method with all or None set to false
- D. Deactivate the trigger before the integration runs.

Answer: C

Explanation:
Using the Database method with all or None set to false allows the developer to insert the Task records without throwing an exception if some of them fail. This way, the integration can read the task records that were successfully inserted, and the developer can handle the failed records in the trigger or elsewhere. The other options are either too disruptive to the business logic (A and C) or do not prevent the exception from occurring (B).
