- B. Cystocentesis
- C. Arthrocentesis
- D. Laparoscopy

Answer: C

Explanation:

-centesis is a common medical suffix for withdrawing tissue or fluid with a needle.

*Arthrocentesis: Joint, synovial fluid

*Abdominocentesis: Abdominal cavity, peritoneal fluid

*Cystocentesis: Urinary bladder, urine

*Pericardiocentesis: Pericardium, pericardial fluid

NEW QUESTION # 402

A client calls asking if we think her pet should be evaluated. The 10-year-old FS indoor-outdoor long-haired DSH was outside last night but came in before the owner went to bed. The cat usually has a great appetite, but today had to be coaxed off her bed for breakfast and only nibbled a small amount of wet food. The owner watched the cat throughout the day, noting that she was reluctant to move and inactive. You discuss with the owner other signs of pain.

The owner relays that the cat demonstrated all of the following consistent with pain, except:

- A. Purring
- B. Hiding
- C. Constricted pupils
- D. Decreased or lack of grooming

Answer: C

Explanation:

When scared or in pain, cats often have dilated pupils, not constricted ones.

Cats in pain can show various signs, including no signs of distress. However, they may fail to groom themselves normally, which, for a long-haired cat, would be very unusual. Since cats spend most of their time sleeping and grooming themselves, this could signify pain or underlying disease, such as kidney disease.

Many painful cats or cats who do not feel well do not feel like socializing and will often hide or simply remain in one place.

Purring can be a confusing one for owners to understand. Owners generally associate purring with a sense of contentment. However, cats may purr when scared, hurt, painful, or content. So, it has to be interpreted in context and keeping in mind the cat's normal behavior. Other vocalizations may occur, especially if approached, such as hissing or crying. Still, many cats do not vocalize just because they are painful.

NEW QUESTION # 403

You are asked to assist in surgery. You need to scrub in. How long should you ensure skin-to-soap contact time while scrubbing?

- A. 1.5 minutes
- B. 3 minutes
- C. 10 minutes
- D. 5 minutes

Answer: D

Explanation:

When scrubbing for surgery, you want to ensure that all forearm, hand, and finger surfaces are well-scrubbed. Contact time for each location should be a minimum of 5 minutes. Remember, scrubbing before putting on sterile gloves removes any debris and excess oils from the elbows distally. It provides an added layer of protection should the sterile field be breached, as may occur with a torn glove. Additionally, gloves contain minuscule tears in the latex or other material. They cannot be the only protective mechanism relied upon.

Thus, always ensure you scrub with a 5-minute contact time to maximize the effects of the disinfectant chosen. Options include chlorhexidine and povidone-iodine, most commonly.

It wouldn't be wrong to scrub for 10 minutes. Still, more than 5 minutes is unlikely to provide any extra benefits in sterility and may cause skin irritation, and only delays the duration of time the patient is under anesthesia.

NEW QUESTION # 404

What is muscle atrophy?

- A. Abnormally structured muscle
- B. Increased muscle mass
- C. Muscles found in abnormal locations
- D. Reduced muscle mass

Answer: D

Explanation:

Muscle atrophy is the reduction of muscle mass due to protein wasting or lack of use. The individual muscle cells become smaller but do not reduce in total number. Muscle atrophy normally occurs when an animal is injured or has a disease that makes it difficult to use their muscles. This differs from the muscle loss that occurs as a result of aging, which is called sarcopenia. Sarcopenia involves muscle fibers decreasing in both number and size. Over time, this can affect posture control and other factors. Muscle atrophy from injury can be reversible but sarcopenia remains.

Muscle atrophy occurs when muscle mass is reduced, not when muscle mass is increased, when muscles are structured abnormally, or when muscles are located in abnormal locations.

NEW QUESTION # 405

A centrifuge is used in a laboratory for which of the following purposes?

- A. To measure a specific volume of liquid
- B. To hold samples that are being heated at high temperatures
- C. To separate elements found in blood samples
- D. For heating, combustion, or sterilization

Answer: C

Explanation:

Centrifuges are pieces of laboratory equipment used to separate types of matter with different densities. They are used routinely to prepare cytology and serology samples.

Bunsen burners are used for heating, combustion, and sterilization. Crucibles are used to hold samples that are being heated at high temperatures. Pipettes are used to measure a specific volume of liquid.
