NEW QUESTION # 104

What is the difference between a business exception and an application exception in UiPath Orchestrator?

- A. A business exception is used to stop and restart a job while an application exception is used to terminate a job
- B. A business exception is an expected and planned part of the process, while an application exception is an unexpected error or failure
- C. A business exception is raised by the automation workflow while an application exception is raised by the underlying application being automated
- D. business exception is handled by the robot, while an application exception is handled by the Orchestrator

Answer: C

Explanation:
Questions no: 56
In UiPath Orchestrator, a business exception refers to an error that arises due to the business logic or process rules not being met. It is an exception that is expected and can be planned for within the workflow. On the other hand, an application exception describes an error that is rooted in a technical issue, such as an application not responding or a system failure. This type of exception is unexpected and is related to the applications or systems that the robot interacts with1.
