Which component is designed to protect electrical equipment from damage caused by overload or short circuit?

- A. Circuit Breaker
- B. Transfer Switch
- C. Transient

- D. Stabiliser

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

A circuit breaker is a device designed to protect electrical equipment from damage caused by overload or short circuit. Circuit breakers are designed to detect when too much current is flowing through a circuit and to shut the circuit off when that happens. This protects the equipment from damage due to overloading or short circuiting, and it also helps prevent fires and other accidents.
