SAP Certified - Database Administrator - SAP HANA Sample Questions (Q42-Q47):

NEW QUESTION # 42

A regional renewable materials company is refining its SAP HANA administration model for a mixed landscape. The on-premises database supports current analytics, while an SAP HANA Cloud environment is being prepared for a later migration wave. During a review, the administrator finds that the operations dashboard lists both systems under one generic availability indicator. SAP HANA cockpit confirms the on-premises database is available, and SAP HANA Cloud Central confirms the cloud database is running, but the indicator does not show which system each status came from.

The constraint is that the administrator must prevent operations from making environment-specific decisions from combined availability evidence. The handover must support separate operational action for each SAP HANA environment.

Which action best corrects the availability evidence problem?

- A. Use the on-premises availability status as the primary indicator until the SAP HANA Cloud migration is complete.
- B. Keep the combined indicator because both systems are SAP HANA databases and both are currently reachable.
- C. Split the availability evidence by environment and validate the source tool for each SAP HANA system status.
- D. Remove availability tracking for the cloud environment until production workloads are migrated to it.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Feedback:

This resolves the evidence-source ambiguity at the landscape validation layer. Separating status by environment and validating the source tool confirms that availability evidence, SAP HANA target, and operational decision context are aligned.

NEW QUESTION # 43

CHALLENGE 1 - UAT Configuration Evidence Reconciliation

A database administrator proposes accepting the UAT comparison now and adding a note that one configuration value was documented outside the current record. Which response is most defensible?

- A. Move the value review to the cloud migration workstream to avoid release delay.
- B. Accept the note because it acknowledges the difference without delaying UAT.
- C. Require the current administration record to reflect the active value before comparison acceptance.
- D. Ignore the note because the release note already proves the configuration is approved.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Feedback:

The current administration record should reflect the active value before the comparison is accepted. A note may identify the evidence source, but it does not replace an aligned operational record.

NEW QUESTION # 44

A regional paper packaging manufacturer is preparing an SAP HANA upgrade validation for an on-premises administration environment. The upgrade task completed, and SAP HANA cockpit shows the database as available. During validation, the administrator finds that the operations note records the new target level, but the lifecycle evidence file still contains the pre-upgrade component reference from the maintenance rehearsal. The plant reporting team asks to release the system because scheduled analytics are running.

The constraint is that the administrator must prove the upgraded lifecycle state before release. The decision cannot depend only on database availability or successful report execution when lifecycle evidence still reflects the earlier state.

Which action best supports release approval?

- A. Restart scheduled analytics so the reporting workload confirms the upgrade level during execution.

- B. Replace the pre-upgrade lifecycle evidence with the validated post-upgrade component evidence, then approve release after the records align.
- C. Release the system because SAP HANA cockpit shows the database as available and scheduled analytics are running.
- D. Keep the rehearsal component reference because it belongs to the same maintenance sequence and confirms upgrade planning.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Feedback:

This resolves the lifecycle-state mismatch at the upgrade evidence layer. Replacing the pre-upgrade reference with validated post-upgrade component evidence aligns the upgrade task, system state, validation record, and release decision.

NEW QUESTION # 45

CHALLENGE 4 - Operational Recoverability Evidence Gate

The operations lead can accept readiness on schedule using backup completion evidence, or delay briefly to include recovery validation for the validation database and recoverability evidence for the upgraded system. Which path is most defensible?

- A. Accept on schedule because meeting the service review date is the strongest governance outcome.
- B. Cancel the readiness decision because recovery validation was not completed before testing began.
- C. Delay briefly to complete recoverability evidence for systems supporting the readiness package.
- D. Accept on schedule and attach recovery validation to the future SAP HANA Cloud migration plan.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Feedback:

A brief delay is most defensible because it completes recoverability evidence for systems supporting the readiness package. This balances schedule governance with operational resilience evidence.

NEW QUESTION # 46

CHALLENGE 2 - Simulation Monitoring Baseline Control

The team has two possible actions before the second SIT run: tune the database now to improve simulation runtime, or first preserve monitoring evidence and then tune if the evidence supports it. Which action is most defensible?

- A. Replace monitoring evidence with business user feedback from the simulation session.
- B. Preserve the monitoring baseline first, then approve tuning only if current evidence supports it.
- C. Tune now and use the improved simulation runtime as the only rollout readiness measure.
- D. Reject all tuning until the airport analytics migration to SAP HANA Cloud is completed.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Feedback:

Preserving the monitoring baseline first is most defensible because tuning should follow current evidence. This balances performance improvement with reliable administration evidence for SIT decisions.
