CompTIA Data+ Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q196-Q201):

NEW QUESTION # 196

Under which of the following circumstances should the null hypothesis be accepted when $\alpha = 0.05$?

- A. When p is 0.001
- B. When p is 0.04
- C. When p is 0.06
- D. When p is 0.00003

Answer: B

Explanation:

The null hypothesis should be accepted when the p-value is greater than the alpha level, which is the significance level of the test. The p-value is the probability of obtaining a test statistic at least as extreme as the one observed in the sample, assuming that the null hypothesis is true. The alpha level is the probability of rejecting the null hypothesis when it is true, which is also known as a type I error¹².

In this case, the alpha level is 0.05, which means that there is a 5% chance of rejecting the null hypothesis when it is true. Therefore, to reject the null hypothesis, the p-value must be less than or equal to 0.05, which indicates that the test statistic is very unlikely to occur by chance under the null hypothesis. Conversely, to accept the null hypothesis, the p-value must be greater than 0.05, which indicates that the test statistic is not very unlikely to occur by chance under the null hypothesis.

Among the four options, only option D has a p-value that is greater than 0.05 ($p = 0.06$). Therefore, option D is the correct answer. When $p = 0.06$, it means that there is a 6% chance of obtaining a test statistic at least as extreme as the one observed in the sample, assuming that the null hypothesis is true. This probability is not very low, and therefore does not provide enough evidence to reject the null hypothesis.

Which of the following chart types is the most appropriate to represent the average spending of active customers vs. inactive customers?

- A. Scatter plot
- B. Pie chart
- C. Line chart
- D. Heat graph

Answer: B

Explanation:

A Pie chart is the most suitable for representing the average spending of active customers versus inactive customers. Pie charts are effective for comparing parts of a whole, which makes them ideal for visually displaying the proportion of spend between two distinct groups. They are widely used to depict percentage distributions and are straightforward, allowing immediate analysis of the active vs. inactive customer spending distribution at a glance.
