NEW QUESTION # 46

An administrator is configuring security for a patient list.

Which three considerations should the administrator take into account to ensure proper access to the list? Choose 3 answers

- A. When a user's field-level security restricts access to a field used as a display column, the column does not appear in the list.
- B. Administrators can create restriction rules to offset a private organization-wide default setting.
- C. Administrators can restrict access to patient or member lists using standard Salesforce sharing settings on the list.
- D. Administrators can restrict access using HCPatientListSecurity custom setting.
- E. Users with profile or permission sets that restrict access to an object cannot create a list using that object.

Answer: A,D,E

Explanation:

When configuring security for patient lists in Salesforce Health Cloud, administrators must consider object-level, field-level, and list-level access to ensure data privacy and compliance with regulations like HIPAA. Below are the key considerations:

HCPatientListSecurity Custom Setting (A):

This custom setting allows administrators to define and restrict access to patient lists at a granular level. For example, administrators can control which users can view or interact with patient lists based on their role or department.

Field-Level Security Impact (C):

If a user's field-level security restricts access to a field included in the patient list's display columns, the column will not appear in the list. This ensures sensitive data is protected and only accessible to authorized users.

Object Access Restrictions (E):

Users with restricted object-level access (via profiles or permission sets) cannot create or view lists that utilize those objects. This ensures that unauthorized users cannot access or manipulate sensitive data.

Why Other Options Are Incorrect:

B: Restriction rules in Salesforce are used to provide additional access beyond organization-wide defaults (OWDs), not for patient lists.

D: Patient list access is managed through specific Health Cloud mechanisms, not standard Salesforce sharing settings.

NEW QUESTION # 47

A customer that already has Service Cloud is onboarding a new business unit, which needs to use Health Cloud.

Which three organization-wide default settings should an administrator change to ensure the original business unit that leverages Service Cloud does not have visibility into protected health information (PHI)?

Choose 3 answers

- A. Set Person Accounts to Private.
- B. Set related clinical objects to Controlled by Parent or Private.
- C. Set Contact to Controlled by Parent.
- D. Set Health Details to Controlled by Parent or Private.
- E. Set Account and Contract to Private.

Answer: A,B,D

Explanation:

When onboarding a new business unit to Health Cloud while protecting sensitive data for the existing Service Cloud users, adjusting Organization-Wide Defaults (OWD) is critical.

* Health Details to Controlled by Parent or Private:

* Ensures that only users with appropriate access to parent records (e.g., Person Accounts or Cases) can view sensitive health-related information.

* Person Accounts to Private:

* Restricts visibility of patient data at the account level, limiting access to users within the appropriate Health Cloud business unit.

* Related Clinical Objects to Controlled by Parent or Private:

* Applies restricted access to clinical objects like care plans, conditions, and encounters to ensure that PHI is not accessible to Service Cloud users.

* B. Account and Contract to Private: Relevant for managing non-healthcare data but not directly tied to PHI protection.

* D. Contact to Controlled by Parent: While this helps manage access to contact data, it does not address broader clinical objects or PHI.
