APEGS National Professional Practice Examination (NPPE) Exam Sample Questions (Q34-Q39):

NEW QUESTION # 34

An engineering firm recently underwent a practice review after a licensed professional filed a complaint with the professional regulator. During the review, the auditor discovered that some of the drawings were authenticated by a licensed professional who had passed away prior to the authentication date. Upon further investigation, it was found that some non-professional employees were applying the deceased professional's seal and forging their signature. What is the most severe action that the regulator can take in terms of delivering appropriate consequences to this firm?

- A. Take away the firm's permit to practice.
- B. Subject the firm to an additional practice review.
- C. Issue an order to the firm to close down its operations.
- D. Issue an order to the firm to pay for damages due to fraud and misrepresentation.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Misuse of a professional seal and forgery are extremely serious because authentication is how regulators and the public know professional judgment and accountability were applied. When a firm (through its employees) applies a deceased professional's seal and forges signatures, it indicates systemic failures in ethical culture, quality management, and permit compliance, and it can amount to unlicensed practice and fraud. Regulators have authority over firms through permits to practice (or certificates of authorization, depending on jurisdiction) and can impose firm-level sanctions to protect the public. The most severe firm-level regulatory consequence is revocation/suspension of the firm's permit to practice (A), which can prevent the firm from legally offering professional services. Option B is corrective but not the most severe. Option C ("close down operations") is generally beyond a regulator's typical direct power as a business regulator; they can restrict professional practice, not order a company to cease all business activities. Option D is not a typical regulator remedy; compensation for damages is usually determined through civil courts, while regulators focus on discipline, permit sanctions, and referral to law enforcement where criminal fraud is suspected. Therefore, A is the most severe action.

NEW QUESTION # 35

According to relevant Canadian Intellectual property laws, which of the following types of Intellectual property has legal protection immediately and automatically upon creation?

- A. Copyright
- B. Patents
- C. Industrial designs
- D. Integrated circuits

Answer: A

Explanation:

In Canadian intellectual property laws, copyright protection is granted automatically upon the creation of a work without the need for registration or other formalities. This immediate and automatic protection differentiates copyrights from other forms of intellectual property such as patents or industrial designs, which require formal processes of application and approval.

NEW QUESTION # 36

If a major technical project fails because of software errors, a Question that is likely to be asked is. "What tests were performed to ensure accuracy of the software?"

Which of the following procedures is not a good software validation test?

- A. A full-scale duplication of the computation and associated results using similar but different software, hardware, and Input files.
- B. Dummy test runs to check the program's computation using nominal entries such as zeroes or ones to get a known answer.
- C. Apply analytical calculations to a simpler model to find an approximate answer, and then compare it with the software output result.
- D. Estimate possible outcomes using rough calculations and guess work, since full-scale validation can be expensive for a technical project.

Answer: D

Explanation:

In software validation, the procedure that is not a good test is estimating possible outcomes using rough calculations and guesswork (Option D). Proper software validation involves thorough, systematic testing that provides reliable, reproducible results, not estimations based on guesswork. This approach lacks the precision and reliability required in software testing, which seeks to verify that the software performs as expected under various conditions through structured testing methods like dummy test runs, full-scale duplications, and analytical calculations.

NEW QUESTION # 37

Amy, a professional member, works for a major bank that has many aging ATMs nearing their end-of-life and in need of replacement. After evaluating several options, Amy recommends the most expensive option because it offers the best security. However, the bank's decision maker decides not to follow her recommendation and instead goes with the cheapest option, giving the reason that it is the only option that fits their budget.

If, after discussing her security concerns, the bank still selects the cheapest option, Amy should

- A. refuse to accept the decision and ensure that her concerns are documented
- B. raise her concerns to the bank's board members
- C. accept the decision but ensure that her concerns are documented and communicated
- D. raise her concerns to the media

Answer: C

Explanation:

Any should accept the decision but ensure that her concerns about the security of the cheaper ATM options are well documented and communicated. This approach maintains professional integrity by respecting the decision-making process of her employer while fulfilling her duty to provide professional advice concerning security risks. Documenting these concerns ensures that there is a record of her professional recommendation, which can be critical if any issues arise from the decision to go with a less secure option.

NEW QUESTION # 38

What type of action should be taken if a registered architect signs and seals engineering drawings?

- A. The enforcement process
- B. The disciplinary process
- C. Requiring re-registration for His licence
- D. Revoking of his architectural licence and providing him with a mentor

Answer: B

Explanation:

If a registered architect signs and seals engineering drawings, the appropriate action is to initiate the disciplinary process. This is because architects are not typically authorized to approve engineering work unless specifically licensed to do so, and such an action can misrepresent qualifications and potentially lead to safety issues .
