Appian Certified Analyst Sample Questions (Q23-Q28):

NEW QUESTION # 23

You are designing a user interface that requires a confirmation message when the user attempts to delete a row.

Review the image with the confirmation message:

"Are you sure you want to delete the item? "

According to best practices, which button labels should you choose?

- A. False, True

- B. Cancel, Delete
- C. Reject, Approve
- D. Back, Next

Answer: B

Explanation:

According to UI/UX best practices, the button labels in a confirmation dialog should be clear and directly related to the action the user is about to take. "Cancel" allows the user to abort the action, while "Delete" confirms the action to delete the item. This approach ensures that the user understands exactly what will happen when they click either button, reducing the risk of accidental deletion or confusion.

NEW QUESTION # 24

You are trying to decide between using a side-by-side layout or a column layout. Which resource should be referred to in order to make sure that best practices are followed?

- A. Appian UX Design Guide
- B. Appian Tutorials
- C. Appian SAIL Recipes
- D. Appian Discussion Board

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Appian UX Design Guide is the appropriate resource to consult when making decisions about layout choices like side-by-side versus column layouts. This guide provides best practices for designing user interfaces in Appian applications, ensuring that the UI is intuitive, responsive, and consistent with Appian's design principles. Referring to the UX Design Guide helps in making informed design decisions that enhance user experience.

Reference: Appian UX Design Guide

Note: While other resources like Appian Tutorials, Discussion Boards, and SAIL Recipes are useful for specific cases, the UX Design Guide is the primary reference for best practices in UI design.

NEW QUESTION # 25

Review this user story:

"As a website user, I need a 'home' button so that I can return to the homepage with a single click or tap from any page." What are the two suitable acceptance criteria?

- A. Clicking the home button returns the user to the homepage.
- B. The "home" button is visible on all pages.
- C. The "home" button is available in green color.
- D. The "home" button is visible for all users.

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

The correct acceptance criteria are A and D because they directly validate the functional behavior and scope described in the user story. The user story states that a website user needs a home button so they can return to the homepage with a single click or tap from any page. Therefore, one acceptance criterion must confirm the action: selecting the home button returns the user to the homepage. Another acceptance criterion must confirm the availability condition: the home button is visible on all pages. Together, these criteria make the story testable, objective, and aligned to the business need.

Option B is weaker because "visible for all users" is not the main requirement unless the story defines different user roles or access groups. Option C is not suitable because the color green is a design preference and is not stated as a functional requirement or business outcome. Good acceptance criteria should be specific, measurable, and directly tied to the story's value statement.

NEW QUESTION # 26

Review this requirement:

Users expressed the need to navigate in the record to view the audit log information.

How do you translate this into a user story?

- A. "As a user, I need the reports to be accessible via a link, so that I can analyze the data and identify potential issues."
- B. "As a user, I need to be able to see a record and navigate to the audit log tab, so that I can understand the history of actions taken."
- C. "As a user, I need to be able to see a button, so that I can view the audit log."
- D. "As a user, I need to execute an audit log report, so that the audit log displays."

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is D because it translates the requirement into a complete user story that preserves the user need, the Appian context, and the business value. The Appian Certified Analyst objectives explicitly include the ability to translate customer requirements into user stories and illustrate the standard user story format.

A strong user story follows the structure: As a [user], I need/want [capability] , so that [business value] .

Option D satisfies all three parts: the persona is the user, the capability is navigating from a record to the audit log tab, and the value is understanding the history of actions taken.

This also aligns with Appian Records behavior. Appian record views are used to surface different information about a single record based on user needs, and multiple record views can expose different insights for the same record. Therefore, an audit log tab or record view is an appropriate translation of the requirement.

Option A changes the requirement to reports and issue analysis. Option B is too implementation-focused and weak on value. Option C incorrectly frames the need as executing a report. Relevant topics: User Story Creation, Requirements Translation, Records, Record Views, Audit/History Visibility, and Business Value Definition .

NEW QUESTION # 27

You are designing a user interface that requires a confirmation message when the user attempts to delete a row.

Review the image with the confirmation message:

"Are you sure you want to delete the item?"

According to best practices, which button labels should you choose?

- A. False, True
- B. Cancel, Delete
- C. Reject, Approve
- D. Back, Next

Answer: B

Explanation:

According to UI/UX best practices, the button labels in a confirmation dialog should be clear and directly related to the action the user is about to take. "Cancel" allows the user to abort the action, while "Delete" confirms the action to delete the item. This approach ensures that the user understands exactly what will happen when they click either button, reducing the risk of accidental deletion or confusion.
