IIA Essentials of Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q365-Q370):

NEW QUESTION # 365
What is the main difference between a consulting engagement versus an assurance engagement?

- A. Internal auditors must maintain objectivity while performing their work.
- B. The nature of services provided are defined in the internal audit charter.
- C. The objectives and scope of the engagement typically are directed by management.
- D. Internal auditors may assume management responsibilities.

Answer: C

Explanation:
In a consulting engagement, the internal auditors collaborate with management to determine the objectives and scope. In contrast, for assurance engagements, the internal audit activity sets the objectives and scope independently to provide an unbiased assessment.

NEW QUESTION # 366
An organization is considering purchasing a new banking software system and has asked the internal audit activity to evaluate the system. An internal auditor assigned to perform the engagement worked at the software company two years ago and is familiar with the system's design strengths and weaknesses. Which of the following is true regarding impairment to the auditor's objectivity?

- A. The auditor must disclose to the chief audit executive that this situation may impair her objectivity.
- B. The auditor can provide only consulting services, not assurance.
- C. The auditor should decline to perform the audit because personal conflicts of interest are likely.
- D. This situation does not necessitate any action related to the auditor's objectivity.

Answer: C

Explanation:
While internal auditors are not primarily fraud investigators, their role does include a responsibility to demonstrate adequate professional skepticism. This means being alert to conditions that may indicate possible fraud or error while performing audit engagements. Demonstrating skepticism is essential in enabling auditors to conduct thorough and effective audits, especially concerning fraud risks.
