IIA Practice of Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q120-Q125):

NEW QUESTION # 120

A staff auditor, nearly finished with an audit engagement, discovers that the director of marketing has a gambling habit. The gambling issue is not directly related to the existing engagement and there is pressure to complete the current engagement. The auditor notes the problem and forwards the information to the chief audit executive but performs no further follow-up. The auditor's actions would:

- Be in violation of the IIA Code of Ethics for withholding meaningful information.
- Be in violation of the Standards because the auditor did not properly follow up on a red flag that might indicate the existence of fraud.
- Not be in violation of either the IIA Code of Ethics or Standards.

- A. III only
- B. II only
- C. I and II only
- D. I only

Answer: A

Explanation:
Section: Volume C

NEW QUESTION # 121

An organization has an opening for an entry-level internal audit position. When interviewing for the position, which of the following is the least important skill for an entry-level internal auditor?

- A. Interpersonal skills.
- B. Conflict resolution skills.

- C. Time management skills.
- D. Communication skills.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 122

An internal auditor determines that certain information from the engagement results is not appropriate for disclosure to all report recipients because it is privileged. In this situation, which of the following actions would be most appropriate?

- A. Distribute the information in a confidential report to the board only.
- B. Disclose the information in a separate report.
- C. Exclude the results from the report and verbally report the conditions to senior management and the board.
- D. Distribute the reports through the use of blind copies.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 123

Which of the following should an internal auditor document to support an assurance engagement's conclusions?

- A. Satisfaction ratings from management of the area under review
- B. Workpapers, cross-referenced to audit observations
- C. Internal audit policies and workpaper templates
- D. Evidence of all data used in an engagement

Answer: B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

Per Standard 2330 - Documenting Information, workpapers must provide sufficient, relevant, and reliable information to support audit conclusions. The best practice is to prepare workpapers cross-referenced to audit observations, which directly demonstrate how conclusions were reached. Option A is too broad, B is irrelevant, and D is not part of evidence.

NEW QUESTION # 124

An internal auditor plans to conduct a walk-through to evaluate the control design of a process. Which of the following techniques is the auditor most likely to use?

- A. Inspection and reperformance.
- B. Inquiry and observation.
- C. Inquiry and reperformance.
- D. Observation and inspection.

Answer: B

Explanation:

When an internal auditor conducts a walk-through to evaluate the control design of a process, the techniques most likely to be used are inquiry and observation. These techniques allow the auditor to understand how the process is designed and how controls are implemented and followed in practice.

Detailed Explanation:

IIA Standard 2320 - Analysis and Evaluation:

This standard requires internal auditors to analyze and evaluate the information gathered during the engagement to ensure that it is sufficient, relevant, and reliable. During a walk-through, inquiry and observation are key techniques for gathering this information.

Inquiry:

Inquiry involves asking questions of personnel involved in the process to understand the control design, its purpose, and how it is intended to work. This helps the auditor gain insight into the process and identify any potential gaps or weaknesses in control design.

Observation:

Observation allows the auditor to see the process in action. By watching how the process is carried out, the auditor can verify whether the controls are being applied as designed and whether they are effective in practice.

IIA Practice Advisory 2320-1:

The advisory supports the use of inquiry and observation as primary techniques for understanding and evaluating the design and operation of controls during a walk-through.

Why Not Other Options?

Option A (Observation and inspection): While useful, inspection is more about examining documents or physical evidence rather than understanding process design.

Option C (Inspection and reperformance): Reperformance involves independently executing a control, which is more relevant for testing control effectiveness rather than evaluating design.

Option D (Inquiry and reperformance): Reperformance is not typically used in a walk-through focused on control design evaluation.

Conclusion: Option B is correct because inquiry and observation are the most appropriate techniques for conducting a walk-through to evaluate the design of a control, as they provide direct insight into how the process and controls are intended to work, in line with IIA standards.
