ISTQB Certified Tester Foundation Level (CTFL v4.0) Sample Questions (Q245-Q250):

NEW QUESTION # 245
A mid-size software product development company has analyzed data related to defects detected in its product and found out that detects fixed in earlier builds are getting re-opened after a few months.
The company management now seeks your advice in order to reverse this trend and prevent re-opening of defects fixed earlier.
What would be your FIRST recommendation to the company?

- A. Verify existing regression test suite are adequate, and augment it, if required, in order to ensure that defects fixed earlier get re-tested in each subsequent build
- B. If required, tram the teams responsible for development and testing of the modules containing maximum number of defects, and if this does not help, replace them with more knowledgeable people
- C. Automate existing test suits so that lesser time is spent on execution of each test, and more tests can be executed m the available time thus leading to a lower probability of defects slipping by
- D. Analyze the product modules containing maximum defects, and get them thoroughly tested and defects fixed as a one-time activity

Answer: A

Explanation:
Regression testing is a type of testing that verifies that previously tested software still performs correctly after changes. Regression testing can help prevent re-opening of defects fixed earlier by ensuring that they do not cause any new failures or side effects. The first recommendation to the company is to verify existing regression test suite are adequate, and augment it, if required, in order to ensure that defects fixed earlier get re-tested in each subsequent build. This can help improve the coverage and effectiveness of regression testing and detect any regression defects as soon as possible. Automating existing test suites may also help reduce the time and effort required for regression testing, but this is not the first recommendation, as automation may not be feasible or cost-effective for all test cases. Analyzing the product modules containing maximum defects and getting them thoroughly tested and defects fixed as a one-time activity may also help reduce the defect density and improve the quality of those modules, but this is not the first recommendation, as it does not address the root cause of re-opening defects fixed earlier. Training or replacing the teams responsible for development and testing of the modules containing maximum number of defects may also help improve their skills or performance, but this is not the first recommendation, as it may not be necessary or appropriate for all teams. NEW QUESTION # 246
Which ONE of the following options BEST describes Behavior-Driven Development (BDD)?

- A. Is primarily focused on non-functional testing techniques to ensure system reliability and performance.
- B. Defines test cases at a low level, close to the implementation, using unit test frameworks.
- C. Expresses the desired behavior of an application with test cases written in a simple form of natural language that is easy to understand by stakeholders-usually using the Given/When/Then format. Test cases are then automatically translated into executable tests.
- D. Requires testing to be performed after development is completed to validate software functionality.

Answer: C

Explanation:
Comprehensive and Detailed In-Depth Explanation:BDD emphasizes collaboration between developers, testers, and business stakeholders to define system behavior in a readable format (A). It typically uses the Given-When-Then syntax. Unlike unit testing (B), BDD is at a higher level of abstraction. It does not focus solely on non-functional testing (C) and encourages early testing rather than post-development validation (D).

NEW QUESTION # 247
Which of the following sentences describe a product risk?

- A. The development team lacks knowledge of the technology on which the product is based
- B. Failure in acquiring an adequate and test automation tool
- C. The application might not be able to provide the expected responsiveness under a load of up-lo 300 concurrent users
- D. A wrong configuration of the test environment that causes incidents related to the environment and not to the software under test

Answer: C

Explanation:
This question relates to identifying product risks, which are potential problems associated with the product itself, such as software functionality, reliability, usability, and performance. Option A describes a scenario where the application might not meet performance requirements under specific conditions (up to 300 concurrent users), which directly impacts the product's ability to perform its intended function. This is a classic example of a product risk, as it concerns the product's quality and its ability to meet user needs. Options B, C, and D, on the other hand, relate to project risks, which are concerns related to the management and execution of the project, such as tool acquisition, environment configuration, and team expertise, rather than the quality of the product itself.

NEW QUESTION # 248
Given some statements about independence of testing
i. Independence is a replacement for familiarity with the code
ii. Independence helps remove the biases produced because of own work

iii. Similar kind of failures can be detected by anyone iv Assumptions by different people are different revealing weaknesses
Which of the following CORRECTLY represents the benefits?

- A. i and iv
- B. iii and iv
- C. ii and iv
- D. i and iii

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 249
Which of the following is correct with regards to debugging?

- A. Debugging is often performed by test engineers
- B. Debugging identifies the cause of a failure
- C. Debugging is considered part of the testing activities
- D. Debugging is intended to find as many defects as possible in the code

Answer: B

Explanation:
Debugging is the process of finding, analyzing and removing the causes of failures in software. Debugging is not considered part of testing, but rather a development activity that can involve testing. Debugging is not intended to find as many defects as possible, but rather to fix the specific failure that was observed. Debugging is usually performed by developers, not by test engineers.
