NEW QUESTION # 20

A user accessing sensitive data is experiencing repeated issues with accessing certain files in Google Drive from their laptop by using the Chrome browser. When you contact Google support, the support representative asks to review an HTTP archive file recording (HAR). You need to share logs with Google support without compromising data privacy. What should you do?

- A. Open the HAR file in a text editor and delete sensitive information. Upload the HAR file to Google Drive and share the file only with the Google support representative
- B. Ask the Google support representative for access to a Google Drive folder used by the Google support team. Upload the HAR file.
- C. Upload the HAR file to Google Drive and share the file with the Google support representative.
- D. Share your screen with the Google support representative so they can view the file without having a copy of the file.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The HAR (HTTP Archive) file can contain sensitive information, such as URLs, request headers, cookies, or other data that could expose personal or confidential information. To ensure privacy and security, you should review the HAR file, remove any sensitive information manually using a text editor, and then upload the file to Google Drive for sharing with the Google support representative. This approach allows you to provide the necessary logs for troubleshooting without compromising data privacy.

NEW QUESTION # 21

"...If you're migrating to Gmail from a legacy server, use split delivery to test Gmail with a subset of users. During the testing, the MX records for your domain point to Gmail. Users who have been added in the Admin console get messages in their Gmail inboxes. Set up a catch-all routing rule for unregistered users who need to get messages from the legacy mail server."

NEW QUESTION # 22

User A is a Basic License holder. User B is a Business License holder. These two users, along with many additional users, are in the same organizational unit at the same company. When User A attempts to access Drive, they receive the following error: "We are sorry, but you do not have access to Google Docs Editors. Please contact your Organization Administrator for access." User B is not presented with the same error and accesses the service without issues.

How do you provide access to Drive for User A?

- A. Select User A in the Directory, and under the Apps section, check whether Drive and Docs is disabled. If so, enable it in the User record.
- B. In Apps > Google Workspace, determine the Group that has Drive and Docs enabled as a service. Add User A to this group.

- C. Select User A in the Directory, and under the Licenses section, change their license from Basic to Business to add the Drive and Docs service.
- D. In Apps > Google Workspace > Drive and Docs, select the organizational unit the users are in and enable Drive for the organizational unit.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Access the Admin Console: Log into your Google Workspace Admin Console.

Select User A: Navigate to the Directory and select User A's account.

Check Licenses: Under the Licenses section, check the current license type of User A. As User A holds a Basic License, they lack access to certain services available to Business License holders.

Change License: Change User A's license from Basic to Business. This can be done by assigning the Business License to User A within the Licenses section.

Verify Access: After changing the license, verify that User A can now access Google Drive and Docs without any errors.
