問題 #109

In what deployment scenarios would it be desirable to enable peer-to-peer traffic blocking?

- A. In corporate Voice over Wi-Fi networks with push-to-talk multicast capabilities
- B. At public hot-spots in which many clients use diverse applications
- C. In university environments using multicast video training sourced from professor's laptops
- D. In home networks in which file and printer sharing is enabled

答案: B

解題說明:

Peer-to-peer blocking (also called client isolation) is useful in open or public WLANs to prevent devices from communicating directly with each other.

B). In public hot-spots, isolating users helps protect against malware spread, snooping, and attacks from nearby devices.

Incorrect:

A). In home networks, peer-to-peer communication is often desired for file sharing.

C). Voice over Wi-Fi may rely on peer communication (e.g., multicast).

D). In university setups using multicast, peer-to-peer restrictions could hinder functionality.

問題 #110

What statement is true regarding the nonces (ANonce and SNonce) used in the IEEE 802.11 4 Way Handshake?

- A. The Supplicant uses the SNonce to derive its unique PTK and the Authenticator uses the ANonce to derive its unique PTK, but the nonces are not shared.
- B. Nonces are sent in EAPoL frames to indicate to the receiver that the sending station has installed and validated the encryption keys.
- C. Both nonces are used by the Supplicant and Authenticator in the derivation of a single PTK.
- D. The nonces are created by combining the MAC addresses of the Supplicant, Authenticator, and Authentication Server into a mixing algorithm.

答案: C

解題說明:

The PTK derivation requires:

PMK

ANonce (generated by the Authenticator)

SNonce (generated by the Supplicant)

MAC addresses of both Authenticator and Supplicant

Both the Supplicant and Authenticator derive the same PTK using identical inputs during the 4-Way Handshake.

Incorrect:

B). The nonces are shared-each party uses both ANonce and SNonce.

C). Nonces indicate no such validation message.

D). The MACs are part of the PTK input but not used to generate the nonces themselves.

問題 #111

Given: You are the WLAN administrator in your organization and you are required to monitor the network and ensure all active WLANs are providing RSNs. You have a laptop protocol analyzer configured.

In what frame could you see the existence or non-existence of proper RSN configuration parameters for each BSS through the RSN IE?

- A. Data frames

- B. CTS
- C. Beacon
- D. Probe request
- E. RTS

答案： C

解題說明：

The RSN (Robust Security Network) Information Element (IE) is used to advertise the security capabilities of a wireless network, particularly for WPA2 and WPA3 networks. This RSN IE is contained in Beacon and Probe Response management frames, not in Probe Request, RTS, CTS, or Data frames. The Beacon frame is sent periodically by an AP to announce its presence and includes critical information about the BSS, including security settings like the RSN IE.

You would use a protocol analyzer to capture Beacon frames and inspect the RSN IE field to confirm if a BSS is properly configured to use RSN protections such as WPA2-Enterprise or WPA2-Personal.

問題 #112

Given: You have a Windows laptop computer with an integrated, dual-band, Wi-Fi compliant adapter. Your laptop computer has protocol analyzer software installed that is capable of capturing and decoding 802.11ac data.

What statement best describes the likely ability to capture 802.11ac frames for security testing purposes?

- A. All integrated 802.11ac adapters will work with most protocol analyzers for frame capture, including the Radio Tap Header.
- B. Laptops cannot be used to capture 802.11ac frames because they do not support MU-MIMO.
- C. Integrated 802.11ac adapters are not typically compatible with protocol analyzers in Windows laptops. It is often best to use a USB adapter or carefully select a laptop with an integrated adapter that will work.
- D. Only Wireshark can be used to capture 802.11ac frames as no other protocol analyzer has implemented the proper frame decodes.
- E. The only method available to capture 802.11ac frames is to perform a remote capture with a compatible access point.

答案： C

解題說明：

Most integrated Wi-Fi adapters in Windows laptops are not capable of entering "monitor mode" or capturing 802.11ac frames properly. Compatibility with protocol analyzers like Wireshark or Omnipeek requires special drivers or specific USB adapters. Therefore, it is recommended to use a USB adapter known to support monitor mode and frame capture on 802.11ac for accurate and complete data capture.

Incorrect:

- A). Not all adapters support protocol analyzer features.
- C). MU-MIMO support is irrelevant for frame capture.
- D). Other analyzers besides Wireshark can decode 802.11ac (e.g., Omnipeek).
- E). Remote capture is not the only method-local USB adapters are effective too.

問題 #113

While seeking the source of interference on channel 11 in your 802.11n WLAN running within 2.4 GHz, you notice a signal in the spectrum analyzer real time FFT display. The signal is characterized with the greatest strength utilizing only 1-2 megahertz of bandwidth and it does not use significantly more bandwidth until it has weakened by roughly 20 dB. At approximately -70 dB, it spreads across as much as 35 megahertz of bandwidth.

What kind of signal is described?

- A. A high-power, narrowband signal
- B. A deauthentication flood from a WIPS blocking an AP
- C. A 2.4 GHz WLAN transmission using transmit beam forming

- D. An HT-OFDM access point
- E. A high-power ultra wideband (UWB) Bluetooth transmission
- F. A frequency hopping wireless device in discovery mode

答案：A

解題說明：

Spectrum analyzer observations indicate a narrow 1-2 MHz peak with a strong signal, which broadens only when significantly attenuated. This behavior matches a high-powered narrowband interferer (like a microwave ignitor or industrial radio) - not Bluetooth hopping or standard WLAN signals
