NEW QUESTION # 19

Professional engineers and geoscientists are not required to perform validation tests for software

- A. open-sourced through an active online community
- B. previously tested by a qualified team within the same company
- C. developed In-house by another engineer or geoscientist
- D. commercially purchased by the same company

Answer: D

Explanation:

Professional engineers and geoscientists are not exempt from performing validation tests for software that is commercially purchased by the same company (Option D). Regardless of the software's source, engineers and geoscientists have a duty to ensure that any tool or software used in professional practice meets applicable standards and is suitable for its intended use, which includes validating even commercially acquired software.

NEW QUESTION # 20

Which of the following roles or responsibilities do regulators of professions play in society?

- A. Render services based on advanced knowledge, skill, and Judgement, which the public take on trust.
- B. Manage career advancement of licensed professionals in line with their level of experience, knowledge, and responsibility.
- C. Provide technological advancements, the development of expertise, and the formulation of codes and standards.
- D. Accept the authority to discipline members who fail to comply with proper standards of practice and conduct.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Regulators of professions play the role of accepting the authority to discipline members who fail to comply with proper standards of practice and conduct (Option B). This function is critical to maintaining the integrity of the professions and ensuring that the public trust is upheld. Regulators set and enforce standards, handle complaints, and can impose penalties ranging from fines to revocation of licenses to protect the public from malpractice and uphold high standards within the profession.

NEW QUESTION # 21

A licensed professional secures a contract to plan a completion design for development wells in an oil field, two completion technologies are viable options; designs "A" and "B." The client has voiced a strong preference toward Design B, believing that this newer technology yields far better production results.

Although the professional has limited experience in Design B, they believe their vast Design A experience will provide adequate background. After a few weeks, the professional realises that they have underestimated the complexities of Design B and are not comfortable pursuing this option.

Which of the following actions is most appropriate for the professional in this situation?

- A. For an Incremental cost, the professional recommends a Design A variant of excessive size, confident that the Increased magnitude will offset any Inefficiencies in design.
- B. With client consultation and approval, the professional subcontracts a Design B specialist to assist In delivering the optimum design at cost and on schedule.
- C. The professional recommends a familiar Design A. confident that this will meet the client's needs in regard to production, cost, and timelines.
- D. The professional informs the client that due to unforeseen complexities, additional time is required to properly research and plan the optimum Design B.

Answer: B

Explanation:

In this scenario, the most appropriate action for the professional is to consult with the client and, upon approval, subcontract a Design B specialist to assist in delivering the optimal design on schedule and within budget (Option C). This approach adheres to professional ethics by prioritizing the client's preferences and project requirements while addressing the professional's limitations in expertise concerning Design B. It ensures the project's success through collaborative expertise, maintaining integrity and professionalism.

NEW QUESTION # 22

In which of the following situations Is It necessary that a professional be Informed that his or her work Is being reviewed?

- A. When a lawyer requests the review under solicitor-client privilege
- B. When an association conducts a practice review to ensure continuing competency
- C. When public safety is involved
- D. When proprietary matters such as trade secrets are involved

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is D. It is necessary for a professional to be informed that his or her work is being reviewed when an association conducts a practice review to ensure continuing competency. This notification is part of maintaining transparency in the review process and upholding the professional's right to be informed about assessments of their work. Practice reviews are typically mandated by professional associations to ensure that all members meet the required standards of professional practice, and informing the members about these reviews is a standard procedure.
