You have an Azure Cognitive Search service.

During the past 12 months, query volume steadily increased.

You discover that some search query requests to the Cognitive Search service are being throttled.

You need to reduce the likelihood that search query requests are throttled.

Solution: You add indexes.

Does this meet the goal?

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

Instead, you could migrate to a Cognitive Search service that uses a higher tier.

Note: A simple fix to most throttling issues is to throw more resources at the search service (typically replicas for query-based throttling, or partitions for indexing-based throttling). However, increasing replicas or partitions adds cost, which is why it is important to know the reason why throttling is occurring at all.

NEW QUESTION # 313

Note: This question is part of a series of questions that present the same scenario. Each question in the series contains a unique solution that might meet the stated goals. Some question sets might have more than one correct solution, while others might not have a correct solution.

After you answer a question in this section, you will NOT be able to return to it. As a result, these questions will not appear in the review screen.

You have an Azure subscription that contains an Azure OpenAI resource named AI1 and an Azure AI Content Safety resource named CS1.

You build a chatbot that uses AI1 to provide generative answers to specific questions and CS1 to check input and output for objectionable content.

You need to optimize the content filter configurations by running tests on sample questions.

Solution: From Content Safety Studio, you use the Safety metaprompt feature to run the tests.

Does this meet the requirement?

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Safety metaprompt feature is generally used to enhance safety by adding specific guidance to the model's responses. However, it is not designed for directly testing or optimizing content filter configurations with sample questions in Content Safety Studio.

To meet the requirement of testing content filters on sample questions, you should use the Moderate text content feature, as it specifically allows you to check for objectionable content in text input and output. Therefore, using the Safety metaprompt feature does not fulfill the requirement.
