NEW QUESTION # 168

An important stage of personal time management is to take control of appointments. Determined by external obligation, appointments constitute interaction with other people and an agreed-on interface between your activities and those of others. Start with a simple appointment diary. List all appointments including regular and recurring ones. Now, be ruthless and eliminate the unnecessary. There may be committees where you can't productively contribute or where a subordinate may be able to participate. Eliminate the waste of your time. Effectively managing your appointments allows you to:

- A. delegate responsibility to subordinates
- B. make more efficient use of your time
- C. attend only the most important meetings
- D. spend more time with your subordinates

Answer: B

Explanation:

Effective appointment management eliminates the waste of your time, as explained in the last sentence of the passage.
