- A. add the rack system to the HPE OneView instance used to manage HPE Synergy to centralize management of all systems.
- B. Deploy an HPE OneView virtual appliance, and, after configuration, use it to manage only the rack systems.

- C. connect the rack system to an IPDU and add the IPDU to the HPE. OneView instance that is used for HPE synergy management.
- D. Deploy HPE OneView Global Dashboard and add the rack systems there, as AMD systems are not directly in HPE OneView.

Answer: B

Explanation:

HPE OneView can manage both HPE Synergy and HPE ProLiant rack servers, but not from the same appliance instance when Synergy is involved.

When HPE OneView is used to manage HPE Synergy, it uses a special Synergy-specific appliance (Composer or Composer2), which cannot directly manage rack servers like the HPE ProLiant DL385 Gen10 Plus v2.

To manage rack servers, the customer must deploy a separate HPE OneView virtual appliance dedicated for that purpose.

Once deployed and configured, this appliance can manage HPE ProLiant rack servers independently.
