- C. Exabyte
- D. Petabyte
- E. Terabyte
- F. Gigabyte

Answer: A,C,D,E,F

NEW QUESTION # 482

Snowflaking is the term given to normalizing the flat, single-table, dimensional structure in a star schema into the respective component hierarchical or network structures.

- A. FALSE
- B. TRUE

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 483

Enterprise data architects in an application migration project are primarily concerned with:

- A. Mapping outliers
- B. Changes to business processes
- C. Mapping of data to business processes
- D. Data mapping specifications
- E. Resolving data complexity

Answer: C

Explanation:

In application migration projects, enterprise data architects focus on aligning data with business processes to ensure the new system supports organizational goals. The DAMA-DMBOK states: "Data architects are responsible for mapping data to business processes to ensure that data structures support business capabilities during system migrations" (DMBOK2, Chapter 4: Data Architecture, p. 141).

Options B, C, D, and E are secondary: B involves process owners, C and E are vague, and D is a tactical task, not the primary concern.

Reference:DAMA-DMBOK2, Chapter 4: Data Architecture, Section 3.1, p. 141.

NEW QUESTION # 484

Some common data quality business rule types are:

- A. Range conformance
- B. Format compliance
- C. Mapping conformance
- D. Definitional conformance

Answer: A,B,C,D

NEW QUESTION # 485

Why is it so important to conduct a Data Governance Readiness Assessment?

- A. It is important because the organization will have an opportunity for business people to be identified as data stewards
- B. It will identify the readiness and level of maturity that an organization will need to effectively govern and sustain its data, process, and policies
- C. It is important because it will prove that the IT department is best qualified to define, develop, and manage the organization's data assets
- D. It will give the Business some metrics
- E. Because it will show that the Data Governance team is working hard

Answer: B

Explanation:

A readiness assessment evaluates an organization's maturity for data governance. The DAMA-DMBOK states: "A Data Governance Readiness Assessment identifies the organization's maturity level and readiness to effectively govern and sustain its data, processes, and policies" (DMBOK2, Chapter 3: Data Governance, p. 121). Option E is correct.
