CompTIA A+ 220-1101 Practice Test Questions and answers | updated 2024

B. Restart the printer's spooler

The print spooler is the software responsible for storing print jobs and sending them to the printer. If the printer spooler has failed or has stopped, then none of the print jobs will be sent to the printer. - The printer in the accounting department has stopped all printing processes. The print queue shows seven jobs in the queue waiting to be printed. Which of the following would be the BEST next troubleshooting step?

A. Send a test job to the printer and move it to the top of the queue

B. Restart the printer's spooler

C. Install an updated version of the printer driver

D. Delete everything in the queue and resend the print jobs

A. Modify the BIOS to boot from the internal hard drive

The boot order is managed in the system BIOS, and one way to avoid the computer from attempting to boot from an external storage device is to move the internal drive to have a higher boot priority. - 7. A system administrator has connected an external USB drive to a computer to transfer some documents. When booting the computer, the system tries to boot from the external drive and gives an error message. Which of the following would be the BEST way to prevent the USB drive from booting?

A. Modify the BIOS to boot from the internal hard drive

B. Modify the boot order in Windows Disk Management

C. Rebuild the MBR on the external hard drive

D. Disable the external drive in Device Manager

C. Print driver is configured for PCL

The page description language configured in a printer driver must match the language on the printer. If a device prints to a PostScript printer using Hewlett-Packard's PCL (Printer Command Language), the output will appear garbled and unreadable. - A user's print jobs to a new multifunction printer produce pages of garbled text, but jobs from other users are printing normally. Which of the following would be the MOST likely reason for this issue?

A. Printer driver specifies secured prints

B. Faulty network cable

C. Print driver is configured for PCL

D. Application is not authorized to print

B. Tone generator

A tone generator is used to produce an analog tone on the cable, and an inductive probe is used to "listen" for the tone on the other end of the cable. - A network connection in a conference room was installed years ago, and there's no documentation for the cable run. Connecting a device to the cable results in a successful Ethernet connection, so the other end of the cable should terminate somewhere in the wiring closet. Which of these tools would be the best choice to find the other end of the network connection?

A. Cable tester

CompTIA A+ Certification Exam: Core 1 Sample Questions (Q229-Q234):

NEW QUESTION # 229

While implementing a non-carrier-grade wireless backhaul, a technician notices the current channel selection is externally polluted with various RF signals. Upon performing a spectral analysis, the technician discovers a channel containing almost no RF pollution. Unfortunately, the technician is unable to select that channel.

Which of the following is the MOST likely reason for this issue?

- A. The device requires a firmware update to unlock the channel.
- B. The channel is reserved for licensed band use.
- C. The channel must be unblocked by the vendor.
- D. The channel selection is defective, contact the manufacturer.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

The 2.4 GHz band is subdivided into up to 14 channels, spaced at 5 MHz intervals from 2412 MHz up to 2484 MHz.

Wi-Fi requires bandwidth of approximately 20 MHz, not 5 MHz. Consequently, a site designer needs to choose the channels that do not overlap. On a WLAN where only the first 11 channels are available, channels

1, 6, and 11 can be selected as non-overlapping. Note: In the Americas, regulations permit the use of channels 1-11 only, while in Europe, channels 1-13 are permitted. In Japan, all 14 channels are permitted.

NEW QUESTION # 230

A technician is reviewing the following network settings for a workstation that is having trouble accessing the internet:

Which of the following is causing the issue?

- A. The netmask is wrong.
- B. IPv6 should be used instead of IPv4.
- C. The workstation has the incorrect gateway.
- D. Networking was not configured using DHCP.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The IPv4 address (192.168.10.5) and the gateway address (192.168.1.1) are on different subnets. With a netmask of 255.255.255.0, the network part of the IPv4 address is 192.168.10.x, while the network part of the gateway address is 192.168.1.x. For the workstation to correctly route traffic to the gateway, both must be on the same subnet. The correct gateway address should be within the same subnet as the IPv4 address, such as 192.168.10.1.

NEW QUESTION # 231

A technician responds to a help desk ticket that indicates a user's workstation is not booting. The technician initially suspects a failed hard drive. The technician performs diagnostics and confirms the hard drive is fully operational. Which of the following steps should the technician complete NEXT?

- A. Configure a new RAID array.
- B. Consider another possible cause of the issue.
- C. Restore the latest backup of the system.
- D. Report the status of the drive and close the ticket.
- E. Reinstall the operating system.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The technician has already confirmed that the hard drive is fully operational. This means that the problem is likely with something else, such as the operating system, the BIOS, or the motherboard.

The technician should consider the following possible causes:

Operating system corruption: The operating system may have become corrupted due to a power outage, virus, or other software problem.

BIOS failure: The BIOS is the firmware that controls the basic functions of the computer. If the BIOS fails, the computer will not be able to boot.

Motherboard failure: The motherboard is the main circuit board of the computer. If the motherboard fails, the computer will not be able to boot.

The technician can use the BIOS or a bootable diagnostic tool to test the hardware components of the computer. If the hardware components are all functioning properly, then the problem is likely with the operating system. In this case, the technician can reinstall the operating system.

If the hardware components are not functioning properly, then the technician will need to replace the faulty component.

NEW QUESTION # 232

An engineer is experiencing unexpected reboots on a graphics workstation when rendering complex 3-D models. The workstation is configured with a 115V power supply that is rated at 200W and connected to a UPS. The central processing unit contains 16 hyperthreaded cores, and a discrete graphics solution utilizing an 8-pin power connector is installed in a PCI Express x16 slot. Which of the following indicates where the technician should begin troubleshooting?

- A. The motherboard, as only standard PCI slots should be used for high-end graphics cards, not PCI Express slots
- B. The UPS, as 115V is insufficient for the configuration and should be increased to 220V
- C. The power supply, as 200W is insufficient when the GPU is heavily tasked
- D. The graphics card, as it is the component that triggers the unexpected reboots

Answer: C

Explanation:

The unexpected reboots on a graphics workstation when rendering complex 3-D models may be caused by insufficient power supply. The workstation is configured with a 115V power supply that is rated at 200W, which may not be enough when the GPU is heavily tasked. The technician should begin troubleshooting by checking the power supply.

NEW QUESTION # 233

A technician is creating a new RAID array for a customer. After interviewing the customer, the technician decides to implement a RAID array of striping without parity. Which of the following reasons would lead the technician to choose striping without parity instead of striping with parity?

- A. Speed is the most important consideration.
- B. Uptime is the customer's biggest concern
- C. Available storage space needs to be maximized
- D. Redundancy and speed are equally important

Answer: A
