NEW QUESTION # 70

An analyst is building a reporting deck. The deck must include tracking and visualizing metrics and row-level security. Which of the following actions should the analyst take after meeting all of the requirements?

- A. Present an analysis of the data.
- B. Explain the desired level of reporting detail.
- C. Find out the project due date.
- D. Show a mock-up to the team

Answer: D

Explanation:

This question pertains to the Visualization and Reporting domain, focusing on the process of building a reporting deck. After meeting requirements (tracking metrics, visualizing data, and row-level security), the next step involves validation with stakeholders.

* Show a mock-up to the team (Option A): Creating a mock-up and presenting it to the team ensures alignment on design and functionality before finalizing, which is a standard next step in report development.

* Explain the desired level of reporting detail (Option B): This should have been done earlier during requirements gathering, not after meeting them.

* Present an analysis of the data (Option C): Data analysis might inform the deck, but the task focuses on building the deck, not presenting analysis.

* Find out the project due date (Option D): The due date should have been established earlier in the project planning phase.

The DA0-002 Visualization and Reporting domain includes "translating business requirements to form the appropriate visualization," and showing a mock-up ensures the reporting deck meets stakeholder expectations.
