dbt Labs dbt Analytics Engineering Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q205-Q210):

NEW QUESTION # 205

You want to experiment with a new column in an existing model without risking production changes. Which configuration strategy in your `dbt_project.yml` would support this safely?

- A. Add a `-select` flag when using `dbt run` to execute only the modified model.
- B. Modify the model SQL using the `config.get()` macro to dynamically control the column's behavior
- C. Utilize git branches and have different `dbt_project.yml` files for your production and experimental branches.
- D. Define separate configurations for the column under the model and use the `enabled` property.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Model configurations with the `enabled` property offer a structured way to experiment within the project file.

NEW QUESTION # 206

You're setting up baseline comparisons with historical data

a. Which factors are crucial to consider when selecting or generating the baseline dataset?

- A. The data volume in the baseline should be large enough to identify statistical patterns.
- B. The baseline needs to align in structure (schemas) with the dbt models being tested.
- C. If using data, the baseline might need sanitization to remove PII-
- D. The baseline should cover a representative time range relevant to your analysis.

Answer: B,C,D

Explanation:

Each of these directly impacts the validity and usefulness of the baseline for comparison. B, while good, is less universally critical.

NEW QUESTION # 207

You have a dbt project with models defined as views. After deploying to a production database, the view objects are present, but no data is displayed when querying them. What might be the root cause?

- A. There's a bug in dbt's SQL generation that specifically affects views in certain environments.
- B. Permissions granted in production don't allow reading data from the underlying tables.
- C. Your dbt job didn't run successfully, so the views were created empty.
- D. Dbt view materializations behave differently in production.

Answer: B

Explanation:

B is a common security-related cause of 'missing' data. The others are less likely; views, logs, and dbt core logic tend to be consistent.

NEW QUESTION # 208

(Multiple Select)

- A. Enforcing specific ratios or relationships between aggregated values.
- B. Checking for referential integrity with a separate lookup table.
- C. Validating that the row count of the staging model falls within an expected range.
- D. Ensuring column ordering matches an external specification.

Answer: A,B,C

Explanation:

These involve domain-specific logic or cross-table checks, which are not covered by standard generic tests. D (column order) is typically less critical for analysis purposes.

NEW QUESTION # 209

(Multiple Select)

- A. You need to frequently load incremental data using dbt's snapshot feature.
- B. Downstream BI dashboards rely on up-to-date data transformed by your dbt models-
- C. Upstream data sources update on a predictable cadence (e.g., daily extracts).
- D. Your data warehouse has time-based pricing tiers, and you need models to refresh during off-peak hours.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

B aligns model runs with data availability. C ensures BI dashboards reflect the latest data. A is cost optimization, not a core freshness requirement. D snapshots are more about change tracking than regular updates.

NEW QUESTION # 210
