NEW QUESTION # 38

Team A works collaboratively on new functionality for a customer application. The acceptance criteria have each been minimally met.

Team A decides to release the functionality with a method for collecting direct customer feedback. Which of the following high-performing team characteristics is Team A demonstrating?

- A. Taking appropriate risks without fear of failure
- B. Balancing abilities on the team with the challenge of the work
- C. Focusing on success over trying to avoid failures
- D. Using regular feedback loops built into the learning cycle

Answer: D

Explanation:

One of the high-performing team characteristics that Team A is demonstrating is using regular feedback loops built into the learning cycle. A high-performing Agile Team is a cross-functional group of people that have everything, and everyone, necessary to produce a working, tested increment of product. They are empowered, collaborative, aligned, and committed to delivering value to the customers and the organization. One of the factors that enable a high-performing Agile Team is using regular feedback loops to learn and improve. Feedback loops are mechanisms that provide the team with information about the outcomes and impacts of their actions, as well as the needs and expectations of their customers and stakeholders. Feedback loops help the team to validate their assumptions, measure their progress, and adjust their plans accordingly. Feedback loops also help the team to foster a culture of experimentation, innovation, and continuous improvement, as well as to increase customer satisfaction and loyalty. Team A is using regular feedback loops by releasing the functionality with a method for collecting direct customer feedback. This allows them to learn from the actual users of their product, and to incorporate their feedback into the next iteration of development. This way, they can deliver value faster and more effectively, as well as to enhance the quality and usability of their product.
