NEW QUESTION # 18

In ABAP programs, what are features of ABAP SQL that are not available with native SQL?

Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question

- A. Execution without a work process
- B. Database independence
- C. Execution of ABAP programs as database procedures
- D. Use of the AS ABAP data buffer

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

ABAP SQL and native SQL are two methods of executing SQL statements within ABAP programs in SAP systems. ABAP SQL, also known as Open SQL, offers certain features not available with native SQL:

* B. Database independence: ABAP SQL provides a level of abstraction from the underlying database system, allowing developers to write database-agnostic code. This means that the same ABAP SQL code can run on any database supported by SAP, such as SAP HANA, Oracle, or Microsoft SQL Server, without modification. This database independence simplifies code maintenance and enhances portability across different SAP system environments.

* D. Use of the AS ABAP data buffer: ABAP SQL leverages the application server's data buffering capabilities, which can significantly improve performance by reducing database access. When data is read using ABAP SQL, it can be retrieved from the buffer if it has been accessed recently, instead of making a round trip to the database. This feature is particularly beneficial for frequently accessed, read-intensive data, contributing to reduced database load and faster data retrieval.

These features underscore the advantages of using ABAP SQL for database operations within ABAP programs, offering enhanced portability, performance, and ease of use in a multi-database SAP landscape.

NEW QUESTION # 21

Which services can you stop in the SAP HANA cockpit (from the SYSTEMDB Manage Services app)? Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question

- A. Daemon
- B. Preprocessor
- C. Compile server
- D. Index server

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

In the SAP HANA database, the SYSTEMDB Manage Services app within the SAP HANA cockpit provides a user-friendly interface for managing various database services. Among the services that can be stopped through this app are:

* B. Compile server: The Compile server in SAP HANA is responsible for the compilation of SQLScript procedures and anonymous blocks. Stopping this service might be necessary for maintenance or troubleshooting purposes, particularly in scenarios involving the optimization or update of SQLScript-based applications.

* D. Preprocessor: The Preprocessor service in SAP HANA is used for text analysis and processing, playing a crucial role in text mining and text analytics features. Administrators might need to stop this service for updates, maintenance, or troubleshooting text analysis functionalities.

The ability to stop these services from the SAP HANA cockpit provides administrators with granular control over the database environment, enabling targeted maintenance and optimization tasks to be performed without affecting the overall database availability.
