CompTIA A+ Core 1 Exam (2026) Sample Questions (Q536-Q541):

NEW QUESTION # 536

A technician is configuring a laptop with an IP address that will not change but will be assigned dynamically. Which of the following configurations should the technician use to achieve this goal?

- A. Lease
- B. Scope
- C. Reservation
- D. Exclusion

Answer: C

Explanation:

A DHCP reservation binds a specific IP address to a device's MAC address, ensuring the laptop always receives the same IP address while still being assigned dynamically by the DHCP server.

NEW QUESTION # 537

An administrator is helping a new employee configure email on a smartphone. The employee also needs access to a shared mailbox. Which is the best email client for this situation?

- A. Built-in
- B. Employee preferred
- C. Open-source
- D. Corporate

Answer: D

Explanation:

Corporate clients integrate natively with enterprise email systems, enabling seamless access to shared mailboxes without compatibility issues or admin workarounds.

Built-in phone apps often lack full shared mailbox delegation, open-source options like Thunderbird may require complex configuration, and employee-preferred apps risk security policy violations.

NEW QUESTION # 538

Which of the following display characteristics would be most important to ensure screen images appear the same as printed output?

- A. Resolution
- B. Color gamut
- C. Pixel density
- D. Refresh rate

Answer: B

Explanation:

Color gamut refers to the range of colors a display can accurately reproduce. For tasks like graphic design or photo editing, ensuring the screen's colors match the printed output is critical. Monitors with wide and accurate color gamuts (e.g., Adobe RGB) are preferred for these applications.

Option B (Pixel density): Incorrect. Pixel density affects image sharpness, not color accuracy.

Option C (Refresh rate): Incorrect. Refresh rate impacts motion smoothness but is unrelated to color matching.

Option D (Resolution): Incorrect. Resolution determines clarity and detail but does not influence color accuracy.

NEW QUESTION # 539

A technician installs an upgraded wireless access point. The technician then notices the activity light comes on briefly and turns off. The access point continues to exhibit this behavior repeatedly and does not come online. Which of the following is the most likely cause of this issue?

- A. High latency
- B. External interference
- C. Port flapping

- D. Channel conflict

Answer: C

Explanation:

Port flapping refers to a network port continuously going up and down, which can prevent the access point from fully coming online. From CompTIA A+ 220-1101 Official Study Guide, Objective 2.4 - Wired and wireless troubleshooting:

"Repeated loss and restoration of network link is called port flapping and may result in network devices, such as access points, not coming online." Verified Source:

NEW QUESTION # 540

Two workstations are connected to a LAN that does not have internet access. A user reports that they are unable to access a network service after a power outage. The web page warns the user that the site is insecure. Which of the following will most likely resolve the certificate error?

(Choose two.)

- A. Replacing the CMOS battery
- B. Setting the system date and time in the BIOS
- C. Scanning the LAN for unauthorized devices
- D. Renewing the SSL certificate
- E. Opening the HTTPS port on the workstation's firewall
- F. Adjusting the browser security settings

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

After a power outage, an incorrect system date and time can cause SSL certificates to appear invalid because certificate validity depends on accurate time settings. Setting the correct system date and time in the BIOS resolves the validation issue. Replacing a depleted CMOS battery ensures the system retains correct date and time settings after power loss, preventing recurring certificate errors.
