Improved staff motivation from training leads to increased

- A. supervision.
- B. workload.
- C. employee morale.
- D. legal protection.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Training plays a critical role in enhancing employee motivation, which directly contributes to higher employee morale. In Human Resource management, well-designed training programs improve employees' skills, confidence, and sense of value within the organization. When employees feel competent and supported, their job satisfaction increases, leading to a more positive attitude toward their work and the organization.

This improved morale often results in better teamwork, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. Training does not inherently increase workload or supervision, nor is legal protection its primary outcome. Instead, it strengthens employee engagement and commitment. Therefore, the most accurate outcome of improved staff motivation through training is enhanced employee morale, making option C the correct answer.

- B. Confinement
- C. None of the above
- D. Release

Answer: A

Explanation:

Detention, particularly in the context of retail loss prevention, refers to the practice of holding a suspected shoplifter temporarily while investigating or waiting for law enforcement. This concept has evolved to provide legal protection for merchants when they act in good faith and with reasonable cause.

Release (A) and Confinement (B) do not fit the protective context.

None of the above (D) is incorrect because "Detention" is a valid and specific term used.
