- A. Read/Write access on the primary relationship
- B. Read/Write access on the junction object
- C. Read/Write access on the secondary relationship
- D. Read access on the primary relationship

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

When updating a record of a junction object in Salesforce (an object used to create a many-to-many relationship), you must have the appropriate permissions.

Required Permissions:

Read/Write access on the junction object: To update the junction object record itself.

Read/Write access on both master (parent) records: Because the junction object is in two master-detail relationships, and its security settings are controlled by the parent records.

Given the options:

Option A: Read/Write access on the primary relationship

Option B: Read/Write access on the secondary relationship

These options correspond to having Read/Write access on both parent objects.

Supporting Reference:

Master-Detail Relationships:

Permissions Inheritance: The detail (junction) record inherits sharing and security settings from the master (parent) records.

Updating Records: To update a detail record, users must have Read/Write access to both the detail record and its parent records.

Reference:

Why Option C is Not Sufficient Alone:

Option C: Read/Write access on the junction object

Insufficient Alone: While necessary, having Read/Write access on the junction object alone is not enough.

Must Combine with Parent Access: Users also need Read/Write access on both master records due to the master-detail relationship.

Conclusion:

To update a junction object record, users must have Read/Write access on both the primary and secondary relationships (Options A and B).

This ensures proper permissions in the context of master-detail relationships.
