ISTQB Certified Tester Foundation Level (CTFL v4.0) Sample Questions (Q381-Q386):

NEW QUESTION # 381

A bank software has a feature of locking down accounts that have an overdraft higher than $10,000.

Due to a bug in the code, the system locks down accounts once they reached $1000 overdraft.

Based on this context, which of the following is correct statement

- A. It is an example of a defect, that if goes undetected, will cause harm to the end customer but not to the company (the bank)
- B. It is an example of a defect that if goes undetected, will not cause any real harm to either the end customer or to the company (the bank)
- C. It is an example of a defect that it goes undetected, will cause harm to the end customer and to the company (the bank)
- D. It is an example of a defect that if goes undetected, will not cause harm to the end customer, but will cause harm to the company (the bank)

Answer: C

Explanation:

A defect is a flaw in a component or system that can cause the component or system to fail to perform its required function. A defect can cause harm to the end customer, the company, or both, depending on the impact and severity of the failure. In this case, the defect in the code causes the system to lock down accounts that have an overdraft higher than $1000, instead of $10,000. This can cause harm to the end customer, as they may lose access to their funds and face inconvenience or financial difficulties. This can also cause harm to the company, as they may lose customer trust and satisfaction, face legal issues or complaints, or incur additional costs for fixing the defect and restoring the accounts. NEW QUESTION # 382

Which of the following statements about traceability is FALSE?

- A. Traceability between test basis items and the test cases designed to cover them, enables experience-based test techniques to be applied
- B. Traceability can be established and maintained through all the test documentation for a given test level, such as from test conditions through test cases to test scripts.
- C. Traceability between test basis items and the test cases designed to cover them, makes it possible to determine which test basis items have been covered by the executed test cases.
- D. Traceability between test basis items and the test cases designed to cover them, enables identification of which test cases will be affected by changes to the test basis items.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Traceability primarily refers to the ability to link test cases back to their sources in the test basis, such as requirements or design documents. This linkage allows for the determination of coverage, impact analysis, and maintaining consistency across test documentation. However, traceability does not directly enable the application of experience-based test techniques, which are more about using the tester's intuition and experience. The ISTQB CTFL Syllabus v4.0 does not state that traceability enables experience-based techniques, making option B the false statement.

NEW QUESTION # 383

Which of the following statements about TDD, BDD and ATDD is TRUE?

- A. BDD is a developer practice where business stakeholders are not usually involved as the tests are directly written at unit/component test level.
- B. ATDD is a black-box test design technique that is applicable exclusively at acceptance test level.

- C. Refactorng is a practice that is an integral part of TDD and is applied both to tests and to code wrtten to satisfy those tests.
- D. ATDD is the practice of running the automated acceptance tests as part of a continuous integration process.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Test-Driven Development (TDD) emphasizes writing tests before code and includes refactoring as a key practice to improve both the tests and the code. This ensures that the codebase remains clean and maintainable. The ISTQB CTFL Syllabus v4.0 discusses TDD as a practice that includes writing tests first, coding to satisfy those tests, and then refactoring the code to improve its structure and readability while keeping the tests intact.

NEW QUESTION # 384

Why it is essential that defects found in a review be reported objectively?

- A. In order to allow the review moderator to easily understand them, and assign them to the right developer for fixing
- B. In order to allow augmentation of existing checklists used for reviewing the work product (S)
- C. In order to allow the author of reviewed work product(S) to take the feedback positively as an effort at improving the product (S) and not as a personal assault
- D. In order to facilitate easy entry of detected defects in a OTS (Defect Tracking System)

Answer: C

Explanation:

The purpose of a review is to find defects and improve the quality of the work product, not to criticize or blame the author. Reporting defects objectively means describing them factually and constructively, without using negative or emotional language that could offend the author or damage their motivation. This way, the author can take the feedback positively as an effort at improving the product and not as a personal assault.
