Juniper Junos, Associate (JNCIA-Junos) Sample Questions (Q114-Q119):

NEW QUESTION # 114

Which two statements are correct about MAC addresses? (Choose two.)

- A. Switches use the Address Resolution Protocol table to assign MAC addresses to network interface cards in the forwarding frame.
- B. The MAC address identifies the physical hardware.
- C. Switches use the destination MAC address to identify the next-hop destination and to change the destination MAC address in the frame.
- D. The source and destination MAC addresses always remains static to the final destination.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

C is correct because the MAC address is a unique identifier assigned to the network interface card (NIC) of a device, allowing it to be recognized at the data link layer.

D is correct because switches use the destination MAC address to forward frames to the correct port, based on their MAC address table. The switch does not modify the MAC address, but it uses the address to determine where to forward the frame.

NEW QUESTION # 115

Which two statements are correct about a Routing Engine? (Choose two.)

- A. It processes management traffic.
- B. It maintains routing tables.
- C. It processes CoS marked traffic.
- D. It forwards transit traffic.

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

The Routing Engine (RE) in Juniper Networks devices plays a pivotal role in the control plane, handling tasks that are critical for the operation and management of the network. One of its key functions is processing management traffic, which includes user commands, system configuration, and monitoring operations. The RE also maintains routing tables, which are essential for network routing decisions. These tables contain network topology information and routing paths, which the RE uses to update the Packet Forwarding Engine (PFE) so that it can forward packets appropriately. The RE does not forward transit traffic or process Class of Service (CoS) marked traffic, as these tasks are handled by the PFE.

NEW QUESTION # 116

What is the network address for a host with an IP address of 192.168.87.125/16?

- A. 192.168.0.0
- B. 192.168.128.0
- C. 192.168.87.0
- D. 192.168.96.0

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 117

What information does the forwarding table require so that the device forwards traffic? (Choose three.)

- A. outgoing interface name
- B. next hop MAC address
- C. BGP local preference value
- D. OSPF metric value
- E. next hop IP address

Answer: A,B,E

Explanation:

The forwarding table in a network device requires specific information to efficiently forward traffic toward its destination. This includes the next hop IP address, which indicates the next router or device in the path to the destination. The outgoing interface name identifies the physical or logical interface through which the packet should be sent to reach the next hop. Lastly, the next hop MAC address is crucial for Layer 2 forwarding decisions, allowing the device to encapsulate the IP packet in a frame that can be understood by Ethernet or other Layer 2 protocols. OSPF metric values and BGP local preference values are used in the routing decision process to select the best path and populate the forwarding table but are not directly used by the forwarding table to forward traffic.

NEW QUESTION # 118

What is the primary system log file that is present in the default configuration of a Junos device?

- A. messages
- B. vrrp
- C. kmd

- D. jsrpd

Answer: A

Explanation:

In the default configuration of a Junos device, the primary system log file is "messages" (B). This log file contains a wide range of system messages, including operational status changes, system errors, and other critical information, making it a key resource for troubleshooting and monitoring the system's health.
