IT Specialist HTML5 Application Development Sample Questions (Q66-Q71):

NEW QUESTION # 66

Review the grid container requirements and mockup on the left. Which markup should you use to define the grid container?

- A. Incorrectly places named area strings under grid-template-columns.
- B. Incorrectly places named area strings under grid-template-rows.
- C. `.grid-container { display: grid; grid-template-areas: "heading heading heading heading heading heading" " " menu content content content right right " " menu contact contact contact contact contact " ; grid-gap: 10px; background-color: orange; padding: 10px; }`
- D. Uses grid-template-columns and grid-template-rows with percentage and pixel sizing.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 67

Which CSS property defines the sides of an element where other floating elements are not allowed?

- A. position
- B. clear
- C. float
- D. display

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct property is clear. In CSS layout, float removes an element from the normal inline flow and positions it to the left or right, allowing following content to wrap beside it. The clear property controls whether an element may be positioned next to preceding floated elements or must be moved below them.

MDN defines clear as the property that sets whether an element must be moved below floating elements that precede it. Typical values include left, right, both, and none, allowing the developer to block floats on one or both sides. display controls the formatting behavior of an element, such as block, inline, flex, or grid. float creates the floating behavior; it does not prevent other floats from appearing beside an element. position controls positioning schemes such as static, relative, absolute, fixed, or sticky. Therefore, only clear directly defines the sides where adjacent floating elements are not permitted. References/topics: CSS floats, content flow, clearing floated elements, layout positioning.

NEW QUESTION # 68

Which three events are valid for the HTML canvas element? Choose 3.

- A. mouseup
- B. scroll
- C. datareceived
- D. blur
- E. play

Answer: A,B,D

Explanation:

The valid selections are mouseup, scroll, and blur. A < canvas > element is represented by HTMLCanvasElement, which inherits from HTMLDivElement; therefore, it participates in the normal DOM event model for element-based interaction. mouseup is valid because it is fired on an Element when a pointing-device button is released while the pointer is over that element, which is a common canvas interaction pattern for drawing tools, games, drag tracking, and selection behavior. scroll is valid as an element event when an element is scrolled, and the HTML event-handler index lists onscroll for HTML elements. blur is also valid because it fires when an element loses focus; a canvas can participate in focus workflows, particularly when made focusable with attributes such as tabIndex. play is excluded in this certification context because it is a media playback event associated with HTMLMediaElement behavior, not canvas graphics interaction. datareceived is not a standard HTML canvas or DOM event. References/topics: canvas DOM interaction, element event listeners, mouse events, focus events, scroll events.

NEW QUESTION # 69

You need to use a flexbox so that new content you add to the container appears at the highest point on a vertical list. You want to achieve this goal without specifying an order. Which value should you use for flex-direction?

- A. column-reverse
- B. row-reverse
- C. row
- D. column

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct value is column-reverse. The flex-direction property defines the main axis of a flex container and determines whether flex items are laid out horizontally, vertically, or in the reverse direction. column creates a vertical layout where items flow from the top of the container toward the bottom. If new content is appended after existing content, normal column layout places that new item later in the visual list, typically lower on the page. column-reverse preserves a vertical main axis but reverses the visual direction, so later items in the source order appear at the highest visual point of the list. This satisfies the requirement without using the order property on individual flex items. row and row-reverse are incorrect because they create horizontal layouts, not vertical lists. The reverse-direction flex values should be used deliberately because visual order can differ from DOM order, but for this exam scenario, column-reverse is the value that places newly appended vertical content at the top. References/topics: CSS flexbox, flex-direction, main axis, column layout, reverse visual flow.

NEW QUESTION # 70

Identify the filter applied to each image.

Complete the markup by selecting the correct option from each drop-down list.

Note: You will receive partial credit for each correct selection.

The screenshot shows a quiz interface with three rows. Each row contains a small image of a beach scene, a code editor with a drop-down menu, and an alt attribute. The filters listed in the drop-down menus are: filter: opacity(20%), filter: saturate(100%), filter: grayscale(100%), and filter: drop-shadow(8px 8px 10px black). The first image is faded, the second is in grayscale, and the third has a drop shadow.

Answer:

Explanation:

```

Review

filter: sepia(100%);
filter: opacity(30%);
filter: saturate(100%);
filter: grayscale(100%);
filter: drop-shadow(8px 8px 10px black);

filter: sepia(100%);
filter: opacity(30%);
filter: saturate(100%);
filter: grayscale(100%);
filter: drop-shadow(8px 8px 10px black);

filter: sepia(100%);
filter: opacity(30%);
filter: saturate(100%);
filter: grayscale(100%);
filter: drop-shadow(8px 8px 10px black);

Explanation:

The first image has a brown/yellow vintage tone, which indicates the `sepia(100%)` CSS filter. Sepia converts the image colors into a warm monochrome effect commonly associated with aged photographs. The second image appears faded and washed out while retaining the same general image content, which corresponds to `opacity(30%)`; this makes the image mostly transparent, allowing only 30 percent opacity. The third image shows the original beach image with a visible shadow offset behind it, so the correct filter is `drop-shadow(8px 8px 10px black)`.

The first two 8px values define the horizontal and vertical shadow offset, 10px defines the blur radius, and black defines the shadow color. `saturate(100%)` would leave saturation at its normal level and would not visibly create a special effect. `grayscale(100%)` would remove color entirely and produce a black- and-white image, which is not shown in the visible rows.

References/topics: CSS filter property, image effects, `sepia()`, `opacity()`, `drop-shadow()`, graphical enhancement with CSS.
