NEW QUESTION # 35

Which TWO of the following statements about exploratory testing are most true?

- A. Exploratory testing is achieved by combining product discovery, test design and execution, and results L- interpretation
- B. Exploratory testing generally begins with the definition of the test charter that defines the detailed test L-' conditions
- C. Exploratory testing is and experience-based test technique which refines acceptance criteria into acceptance test cases
- D. Exploratory testing is rather carried out by people with a good knowledge of the business domain, but not necessarily of the tested functionality
- E. Exploratory testing implements time-boxed sessions to prioritize tests bases on product risk analysis

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

Exploratory testing is a dynamic testing technique where learning, test design, execution, and interpretation occur simultaneously. It is especially useful when detailed requirements are unavailable or when testers rely on experience and intuition.

A is correct: Exploratory testing combines exploration, learning about the product, designing and executing tests on the fly, and interpreting the results - all within the same session.

E is also correct: Exploratory testing usually starts with a high-level test charter that defines the mission, objectives, or focus area for the session. It may not define specific test conditions, but it outlines the scope and intent.

Other options:

B: Not accurate - while timeboxing is used, exploratory testing typically relies on charters and experience rather than detailed product risk analysis to prioritize.

C: Incorrect - exploratory testing is not about refining acceptance criteria; that's part of ATDD.

D: Partially true but misleading - good business domain knowledge helps, but understanding the functionality is also important in exploratory testing.

NEW QUESTION # 36

In Agile an exploratory test session is conducted. Which one of the following concepts applies BEST?

- A. pair programming
- B. refactoring
- C. planning poker
- D. timeboxing Answer

Answer: D

Explanation:

Exploratory testing in Agile projects is a structured but unscripted testing approach where learning, test design, and execution occur simultaneously. Timeboxing is a key practice in managing exploratory testing sessions effectively.

A timebox is a fixed duration (e.g., 60-90 minutes) within which testers explore specific functionalities or risks. It encourages focus, documentation of findings, and prevents overrun or testing fatigue. After the session, testers often hold debriefs to review findings and determine next steps.

Option D is correct because timeboxing is essential for exploratory testing management.

Incorrect options:

A). Pair programming relates to development, not testing.

B). Refactoring is a development technique focused on improving code without changing behavior.

C). Planning poker is used in Agile for effort estimation, not directly related to exploratory testing.

Exact Reference - ISTQB CTFL Acceptance Testing Syllabus (Section 3.1):

"Exploratory testing is often conducted in time-boxed sessions, with a charter guiding the scope of the session."

- A. After having collected the pros and cons of each solutions, you base your decision on those objective criteria
- B. Together with the business analyst, you determine which stakeholders is more important to decide between them
- C. You organize a meeting of the two stakeholders so that they can solve the conflict personally
- D. Instead of discussing conflicting technical solutions, you try to understand the underlying business needs

Answer: D

Explanation:

When stakeholders provide conflicting acceptance criteria, resolving the conflict effectively requires focusing on the underlying business goals rather than getting stuck in technical or solution-level disagreements.

Option D is correct because it aligns with the core role of a business analyst and an acceptance tester: to understand and validate business needs. By exploring the root business objectives, you can help stakeholders reframe the problem and reach a compromise based on what delivers the most value.

Other options:

A may lead to confrontation and unproductive discussion without proper facilitation.

B is risky - prioritizing stakeholders may escalate conflict or appear biased.

C assumes you can objectively resolve the conflict based only on pros and cons, but without understanding the business context, the decision may not meet stakeholder needs.

D). Instead of discussing conflicting technical solutions, you try to understand the underlying business needs
