Salesforce B2B Commerce for Developers Accredited Professional Sample Questions (Q157-Q162):

NEW QUESTION # 157
A developer has made some changes to the products of an existing storefront, but they are unable to see the changes in the products from the store.
Which action did the developer forget to take?

- A. Publish the catalog
- B. Activate the product list.
- C. Publish the storefront.
- D. Rebuild the search index.

Answer: C

Explanation:
The developer forgot to publish the storefront after making changes to the products. Publishing the storefront is a necessary step to make the changes visible to the store visitors. Publishing the storefront updates the site's metadata and content, and also triggers the site index and search index rebuilds. If the developer does not publish the storefront, the changes will not be reflected on the live site.
The following actions are not required or relevant for the scenario:
Activate the product list. This action is only needed when creating a new product list or modifying an existing one. It does not affect the visibility of the products on the storefront.

Rebuild the search index. This action is automatically performed when the developer publishes the storefront. It is not a separate step that the developer needs to take manually.
Publish the catalog. This action is not applicable for Salesforce B2B Commerce for Visualforce, which does not use catalogs. Catalogs are only used by Salesforce B2B Commerce for Lightning Experience.
Finalize and Publish Your Storefront
Customize the D2C Store Template
Configure Public Pages for a Storefront

NEW QUESTION # 158
Northern Tail Outfitters (NTO) is converting an existing aura component into a Lightning Web Component. The aura component has the following source code:
What is the equivalent of this code in a Lightning Web Component?

- A.
- B.
- C.
- D.

Answer: B

Explanation:
The equivalent of this code in a Lightning web component is option B. Option B uses the @api decorator to expose firstName as a public property of the Lightning web component and communicate it with other components or services. The @api decorator is a decorator that marks a property or method as public, which means that it can be accessed by other components or services that use or consume this component. The @api decorator also makes the property reactive, which means that it can track changes and update the component accordingly. In option B, firstName is exposed as a public property using the @api decorator and passed to the child element using an attribute. Option A is incorrect because it uses an invalid syntax for exposing firstName as a public property. The @api decorator should be used before the property declaration, not after it. Option C is incorrect because it uses an invalid syntax for exposing firstName as a public property. The @api decorator should be used with parentheses, not without them. Option D is incorrect because it uses an invalid syntax for exposing firstName as a public property. The @api decorator should be used with camel case, not with hyphens. NEW QUESTION # 159
A developer has just deployed a new Lightning Web Component to an authorized org. What should the developer do next to use the new component on apage?

- A. Go to "Deploy LWC" in Setup.
- B. Go to the page, edit it, and drag the new component onto the page.
- C. Create a Metadata API (MDAPI) conversion file with the Command Line interface (CLI) then go to the page and adjust the positioning.
- D. Navigate 3 to the Page, Click on the "Custom Component Editor,' Click "Publish" on the new component in the list and adjust the positioning.

Answer: B

Explanation:
After deploying a new Lightning Web Component (LWC) to an org, the typical next step to use the component on a page involves navigating to that page, entering the edit mode (usually through App Builder or a similar interface), and then dragging the new component from the components palette onto the desired location on the page. This process is consistent with Salesforce's modular design approach, allowing for easy integration and configuration of components within the Salesforce ecosystem.

NEW QUESTION # 160
Which two statements are true about Global API's in Salesforce B2B Commerce? (2 answers)

- A. Each globalAPI method takes in a Map<String, Object> as a single parameter and returns a Map<String, Object>

- B. Global APIs are versioned.
- C. Global APIs will catch any Exceptions that are thrown as part of missing parameters.
- D. Global APIs will handle Transaction scope, and the Subscriber calling it does not need to handle scope.

Answer: A,B

Explanation:
Global APIs are methods that can be called from any Apex class or Visualforce page within the B2B Commerce managed package or subscriber code. Each global API method takes in a Map<String, Object> as a single parameter and returns a Map<String, Object>. This allows for flexibility and extensibility of the API. Global APIs are versioned, which means that they have a version number in their name, such as ccApi_1_0. This ensures backward compatibility and allows for new features and enhancements to be added without breaking existing functionality. Global APIs do not catch any Exceptions that are thrown as part of missing parameters, which means that the caller is responsible for handling any errors or validations. Global APIs do not handle Transaction scope, and the Subscriber calling it does not need to handle scope. This means that the caller can decide whether to use transactions or not, depending on the business logic and performance requirements. NEW QUESTION # 161
Which method is used to override when extending the Salesforce B2B Commerce logic providers?

- A. doAction
- B. process
- C. doLogic
- D. fetch

Answer: A

Explanation:
The method that is used to override when extending the Salesforce B2B Commerce logic providers is doLogic. This method is responsible for executing the business logic for each logic provider class, such as validating inputs, performing calculations, applying rules, or updating data. By overriding this method, the user can modify or extend the existing logic or add their own custom logic. Salesforce B2B Commerce and D2C Commerce Developer Guide,Logic Classes
