Google Professional ChromeOS Administrator Exam Sample Questions (Q30-Q35):

NEW QUESTION # 30

An organization was recently hacked through an admin's choice of an operating system. Leadership decides to move to Chromebooks for their security.

While the organization waits for Chromebooks to be delivered, what will allow them to continue using their existing devices securely?

- A. ChromeOS Managed Browser
- B. ChromeOS Bytes
- C. ChromeOS Flex
- D. ChromeOS Readiness Guide

Answer: C

Explanation:

ChromeOS Flex allows the organization to repurpose existing devices by installing a lightweight version of ChromeOS on them. This provides a secure and familiar environment while they await the delivery of new Chromebooks. Here's why it's the best choice:
* Security:ChromeOS Flex inherits the security features of ChromeOS, such as sandboxing, verified boot, and automatic updates, mitigating the risks associated with the previous operating system.
* Quick Deployment:ChromeOS Flex can be easily installed on existing hardware using a USB drive, minimizing downtime and allowing employees to continue working.
* Familiar Interface:The user interface of ChromeOS Flex is similar to ChromeOS, ensuring a smooth transition for employees.
Option A is incorrectbecause the ChromeOS Readiness Guide is a resource for planning migration, not an immediate security solution.
Option B is incorrectbecause while ChromeOS Managed Browser enhances security within a browser, it doesn't address vulnerabilities in the underlying operating system.
Option C is incorrectbecause ChromeOS Bytes is a blog, not a software solution.

NEW QUESTION # 31

You have been asked to explain the built-in security features of ChromeOS. What i3 the benefit of having verified boot enabled on a ChromeOS device?

- A. It installs the known safe backup OS every time the device is slatted up.
- B. Running both operating systems on one device at the same time makes It twice as powerful
- C. It allows updates to happen in the background
- D. It ensures that the OS is uncompromised

Answer: D

Explanation:

Verified Boot in ChromeOS is a security mechanism that checks the integrity of the operating system during startup. If it detects any unauthorized modifications or compromises, it can initiate recovery processes to restore the OS to a known good state, ensuring that the device boots up with a secure and untampered operating system.
Option B is incorrect because background updates are a separate feature.
Option C is incorrect because dual-boot is not related to Verified Boot.
Option D is incorrect because Verified Boot doesn't install a backup OS but verifies the existing one.

NEW QUESTION # 32

When setting up a Chrome Enterprise trial, what is a benefit of choosing to verify the domain?

- A. Device management
- B. Application management
- C. Identity management
- D. Network management

Answer: C

Explanation:
When you verify your domain during a Chrome Enterprise trial setup, you establish ownership and control over the domain within Google's systems. This is a crucial step in identity management as it allows you to:
* Manage user accounts: Create, edit, and delete user accounts within the domain, ensuring control over who can access company resources.
* Apply security policies: Enforce security policies like password requirements, two-factor authentication, and access controls for users within the domain.
* Single Sign-On (SSO): Enable seamless and secure single sign-on for users across various Google services and other integrated applications.
By verifying the domain, you essentially gain centralized control over user identities and their access to resources, which is a core aspect of identity management.

NEW QUESTION # 33
What format of certificate encoding is incompatible with ChromeOS devices?

- A. CER
- B. PEM
- C. CRT
- D. DER

Answer: D

Explanation:
ChromeOS primarily uses the PEM format for certificate encoding. While it can handle other formats like CER and CRT, it does not support the DER format. DER is a binary format, while ChromeOS requires certificates in a text-based format.

NEW QUESTION # 34
Your organization is buying new ChromeOS devices to replace older devices. You are receiving these devices and need to dispose of them responsibly. What should you do to each of these devices before disposing of them?

- A. Suspend the devices
- B. Disable the devices
- C. Deprovision the devices
- D. Factory reset the devices

Answer: C

Explanation:
Before disposing of ChromeOS devices, it is essential to deprovision them. Deprovisioning removes the device from the enterprise management console and ensures that it is no longer associated with the organization. This step protects organizational data and licenses.
Verified Answer from Official Source:
The correct answer is verified from the Google Admin Console Device Management Guide, which advises deprovisioning before device disposal.
"Deprovisioning a device ensures it is no longer managed and releases any associated licenses. This is essential before disposing of the device." Deprovisioning is crucial for both security and compliance, as it guarantees that no residual management settings remain on the device.
Objectives:
* Securely retire ChromeOS devices.
* Protect organizational data during device disposal.
