ISACA Certified Information Security Manager Sample Questions (Q23-Q28):

NEW QUESTION # 23
Which of the following presents the GREATEST challenge to the recovery of critical systems and data following a ransomware incident?

- A. Lack of encryption for backup data in transit

- B. Undefined or undocumented backup retention policies
- C. Ineffective alert configurations for backup operations
- D. Unavailable or corrupt data backups

Answer: D

Explanation:
A ransomware incident is a type of cyberattack that encrypts the victim's data and demands a ransom for its decryption. Ransomware can cause significant disruption and damage to critical systems and data, as well as financial losses and reputational harm. To recover from a ransomware incident, the organization needs to have reliable and accessible backups of its data, preferably in an encrypted format. However, if the backups are unavailable or corrupt, the organization will face a major challenge in restoring its data and operations. Therefore, option D is the most challenging factor for the recovery of critical systems and data following a ransomware incident. NEW QUESTION # 24
A successful risk management program should lead to:

- A. elimination or transference of all organizational risks.
- B. containment of losses to an annual budgeted amount.
- C. optimization of risk reduction efforts against cost.
- D. identification and removal of all man-made threats.

Answer: C

Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:
Explanation:
Successful risk management should lead to a breakeven point of risk reduction and cost. The other options listed are not achievable. Threats cannot be totally removed or transferred, while losses cannot be budgeted in advance with absolute certainty.

NEW QUESTION # 25
The contribution of recovery point objective (RPO) to disaster recovery is to:

- A. define backup strategy.
- B. reduce mean time between failures (MTBF).
- C. minimize outage periods.
- D. eliminate single points of failure.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 26
Which of the following practices completely prevents a man-in-the-middle (MitM) attack between two hosts?

- A. Connect through an IPSec VPN
- B. Enforce static media access control (MAC) addresses
- C. Use https with a server-side certificate
- D. Use security tokens for authentication

Answer: A

Explanation:
Section: INFORMATION SECURITY PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT
Explanation
Explanation:
IPSec effectively prevents man-in-the-middle (MitM) attacks by including source and destination IPs within the encrypted portion of the packet. The protocol is resilient to MitM attacks. Using token-based authentication does not prevent a MitM attack; however, it may help eliminate reusability of stolen cleartext credentials. An https session can be intercepted through Domain Name Server

(DNS) or Address Resolution Protocol (ARP) poisoning. ARP poisoning - a specific kind of MitM attack - may be prevented by setting static media access control (MAC) addresses. Nevertheless, DNS and NetBIOS resolution can still be attacked to deviate traffic.

NEW QUESTION # 27
What is the MOST important reason for conducting security awareness programs throughout an organization?

- A. Informing business units about the security strategy
- B. Maintaining evidence of training records to ensure compliance
- C. Training personnel in security incident response
- D. Reducing the human risk

Answer: D

Explanation:
Section: INFORMATION SECURITY PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT
Explanation:
People are the weakest link in security implementation, and awareness would reduce this risk. Through security awareness and training programs, individual employees can be informed and sensitized on various security policies and other security topics, thus ensuring compliance from each individual. Laws and regulations also aim to reduce human risk. Informing business units about the security strategy is best done through steering committee meetings or other forums.
