NEW QUESTION # 31

You have an Azure Load Balancer named LB1 that balances requests to five Azure virtual machines.

You need to develop a monitoring solution for LB1. The solution must generate an alert when any of the following conditions are met:

A virtual machine is unavailable.

Connection attempts exceed 50,000 per minute.

Which signal should you include in the solution for each condition? To answer, select the appropriate options in the answer area.

NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation

Graphical user interface, text, application Description automatically generated

Box 1: Data path availability

Standard Load Balancer continuously exercises the data path from within a region to the load balancer front end, all the way to the SDN stack that supports your VM. As long as healthy instances remain, the measurement follows the same path as your application's load-balanced traffic. The data path that your customers use is also validated. The measurement is invisible to your application and does not interfere with other operations.

Note: Load balancer distributes inbound flows that arrive at the load balancer's front end to backend pool instances. These flows are according to configured load-balancing rules and health probes. The backend pool instances can be Azure Virtual Machines or instances in a virtual machine scale set.

Box 2: SYN count

SYN (synchronize) count: Standard Load Balancer does not terminate Transmission Control Protocol (TCP) connections or interact with TCP or UDP packet flows. Flows and their handshakes are always between the source and the VM instance. To better troubleshoot your TCP protocol scenarios, you can make use of SYN packets counters to understand how many TCP connection attempts are made. The metric reports the number of TCP SYN packets that were received.

NEW QUESTION # 32

You have an on-premises app named App1.

Customers use App1 to manage digital images.

You plan to migrate App1 to Azure.

You need to recommend a data storage solution for App1. The solution must meet the following image storage requirements:

* Encrypt images at rest.

* Allow files up to 50 MB.

* Manage access to the images by using Azure Web Application Firewall (WAF) on Azure Front Door.

The solution must meet the following customer account requirements:

* Support automatic scale out of the storage.

* Maintain the availability of App1 if a datacenter fails.

* Support reading and writing data from multiple Azure regions.

Which service should you include in the recommendation for each type of data? To answer, drag the appropriate services to the correct type of data. Each service may be used once, more than once, or not at all.
