NEW QUESTION # 551

Which of the following is an identity acquisition method that allows a Security Gateway to identify Active Directory users and computers?

- A. Active Directory Query
- B. Account Unit Query
- C. User Directory Query
- D. UserCheck

Answer: A

Explanation:

Active Directory Query is an identity acquisition method that allows a Security Gateway to identify Active Directory users and computers by querying domain controllers for security event logs. The Security Gateway sends a WMI query to each domain controller and receives a WMI event when a user logs in, logs out, or unlocks their computer. The Security Gateway then maps IP addresses to user names based on these events. Active Directory Query does not require any software installation on domain controllers or clients, but it requires certain permissions and configurations on the domain controllers
