SailPoint Certified IdentityIQ Associate Exam Sample Questions (Q12-Q17):

NEW QUESTION # 12

Is this an accurate statement about the Manage Accounts feature in LifeCycle Manager?

If users can request new accounts on an application, IdentityIQ also allows them to request an additional account on the application.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

The statement is not accurate as written. In IdentityIQ LifeCycle Manager, allowing users to request a new account on an application does not automatically mean they can request an additional account on that same application. These are related but distinct account request scenarios. A new account request typically applies when an identity does not already have an account on the target application. An additional account request applies when an identity already has an account and the application is configured to support more than one account for the same identity.

Whether additional accounts are available depends on the application's account model, connector support, application configuration, request configuration, and provisioning policy behavior. Some applications support only one account per identity; in those cases, IdentityIQ may allow creation of the initial account but not allow a second or additional account. Manage Accounts can expose account lifecycle actions such as create, modify, enable, disable, unlock, delete, or request additional accounts, but only when the underlying application and IdentityIQ configuration support those operations.

Reference topics: User-Driven Requests - account request types and operations; Applications - connector and application settings; Provisioning - provisioning policies and account creation behavior.

NEW QUESTION # 13

Is this an accurate statement about preventive policy checking in IdentityIQ?

Preventive policy checking can only stop self-service requests.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

The statement is false. Preventive policy checking in SailPoint IdentityIQ is not limited only to self-service requests. Preventive policy evaluation is used to identify policy violations before access changes are completed. This can occur during access request processing, provisioning-related activity, or other configured request paths where IdentityIQ evaluates proposed changes against defined policies before allowing the transaction to proceed.

A self-service request is only one possible entry point. IdentityIQ access requests may be submitted by an end user, a manager, an administrator, or another authorized requester depending on QuickLink Population rules, request configuration, and access-request permissions. Preventive policy checking evaluates the requested access change itself, not merely the fact that the request was self-initiated. If the proposed access would violate a separation-of-duty, risk, or other governance policy, IdentityIQ can warn, require additional handling, or block the request depending on policy and workflow configuration.

Therefore, the word "only" makes the statement incorrect. Preventive policy checking is a governance control applied to configured access-change activity, not exclusively to self-service actions. Reference topics: Governance, policy detection, preventive policy checking, access request policy evaluation, User-Driven Requests, and provisioning request control.

NEW QUESTION # 14

Is this statement true about Rapid Setup?

Rapid Setup birthright roles are requestable.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: B

Explanation:

No. In IdentityIQ, a birthright role is intended to represent access that is automatically assigned to identities based on defined business criteria, such as lifecycle state, department, location, job function, or other identity attributes. The purpose of a birthright role is automatic access assignment, not user-driven request selection. Rapid Setup can help configure common access-modeling and application-onboarding elements more efficiently, including birthright access patterns, but the birthright concept remains assignment-based rather than request-based.

Requestable access is handled through the access request model, where users select roles, entitlements, or other access items made available through request configuration and QuickLinks. Birthright access is different because it is granted when an identity satisfies the role assignment criteria and is recalculated through identity refresh and role evaluation. Making birthright roles requestable would undermine their purpose as standard baseline access automatically derived from identity data.

Therefore, the statement is inaccurate. Rapid Setup birthright roles are used for automated assignment and baseline access, not as requestable access items. Reference topics: Applications, Rapid Setup, Access Modeling, birthright roles, role assignment, identity refresh, and User-Driven Requests.

NEW QUESTION # 15

Is this displayed in the Identity Warehouse?

List of the user's direct reports (for manager identities)

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: A

Explanation:

Yes. In SailPoint IdentityIQ, the Identity Warehouse is used to review identity-centric information stored in the IdentityCube. For identities that are managers, IdentityIQ can display the list of identities that report to that manager. This information is derived from the manager relationship established during identity aggregation, correlation, and identity refresh processing.

The direct-report relationship is not an application account attribute by itself once modeled in IdentityIQ; it becomes part of the identity model. IdentityIQ uses manager correlation to associate each identity with its manager, and when those relationships are resolved, the manager identity can show its subordinate identities as direct reports. This is important for governance because managers are frequently used as certifiers, approvers, and reviewers in access review and request workflows.

The display of direct reports depends on the identity data being populated correctly and the viewer having permission to access the identity details. However, as a functional capability of the Identity Warehouse, direct reports for manager identities are part of the identity information that can be displayed.

Reference topics: Identity Modeling, IdentityCube contents, manager correlation, Identity Warehouse, identity refresh, and governance reviewer relationships.

NEW QUESTION # 16

Is this an accurate statement about the selection of a connector as part of an application definition?

Some connectors contain a predefined account schema.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: A

Explanation:

Yes. In SailPoint IdentityIQ, some application connectors include predefined schema information because the structure of accounts and groups on those target systems is well known to the connector. When an application is created and a specific connector type is selected, IdentityIQ may automatically populate schema elements such as the account schema, native identity attribute, display attribute, common account attributes, and sometimes group or entitlement schema definitions. This is common for standard connectors where the managed system has a predictable object model.

However, predefined does not mean final or immutable. The application administrator must still review and adjust the schema to ensure it accurately represents the implementation, including which attributes are aggregated, which attributes are searchable, which attributes are entitlements, and which attributes are used for identity correlation. Other connector types, such as generic JDBC, delimited file, or custom connectors, may require more manual schema definition.

This statement is therefore accurate because connector selection can provide default schema structure.

Reference topics: Applications, connector selection, account schema, group schema, schema attributes, aggregation configuration, and application definition.
