NEW QUESTION # 1127

An organization is implementing security review as part of system development. Which of the following is the BEST technique to follow?

- A. Perform incremental assessments.
- B. Review security architecture.
- C. Engage a third-party auditing firm.
- D. Conduct penetration testing.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The best technique to follow when implementing security review as part of system development is to perform incremental assessments. Security review is the process of evaluating and verifying the security requirements, design, implementation, and testing of a system. Security review aims to identify and mitigate the security risks and vulnerabilities of the system, and to ensure that the system meets the security standards and best practices. Security review should be performed as part of system development, which is the process of creating or modifying a system. System development follows a life cycle model, such as waterfall, agile, or spiral, that defines the phases and activities of the system development process. Security review should be performed incrementally, which means that security review should be conducted at each phase and activity of the system development life cycle, and not only at the end of the system development process. Performing incremental assessments can provide the following benefits:

* It can reduce the cost and complexity of security review, as the security issues and defects can be detected and fixed early in the system development process, rather than later when they are more expensive and difficult to resolve.

* It can improve the quality and effectiveness of security review, as the security review can be tailored and aligned with the specific objectives and deliverables of each phase and activity of the system development process, rather than using a generic or one-size-fits-all approach.

* It can enhance the security and performance of the system, as the security review can ensure that the security requirements and controls are integrated and implemented throughout the system development process, rather than added or patched as an afterthought. NEW QUESTION # 1128

Which choice below would NOT be a common element of a transaction trail?

- A. Who processed the transaction

- B. The date and time of the transaction
- C. Why the transaction was processed
- D. At which terminal the transaction was processed

Answer: C

Explanation:

Why the transaction was processed is not initially a concern of the audit log, but we will investigate it later. The other three elements are all important information that the audit log of the transaction should record.

NEW QUESTION # 1129

The organization that establishes a collaborative partnership of computer incident response, security and law enforcement professionals who work together to handle computer security incidents and to provide both proactive and reactive security services for the

- A. CERT/CC
- B. Federal Computer Incident Response Center
- C. Center for Infrastructure Protection
- D. Federal CIO Council

Answer: B

Explanation:

To again quote the FedCIRC charter, FedCIRC provides assistance and guidance in incident response and provides a centralized approach to incident handling across agency boundaries. Specifically, the mission of FedCIRC is to: Provide civil agencies with technical information, tools, methods, assistance, and guidance Be proactive and provide liaison activities and analytical support Encourage the development of quality products and services through collaborative relationships with Federal civil agencies, the Department of Defense, academia, and private industry Promote the highest security profile for government information technology (IT) resources Promote incident response and handling procedural awareness with the federal government

*Answer CERT Coordination Center (CERT/CC), is a unit of the Carnegie Mellon University Software Engineering Institute (SEI). SEI is a Federally funded R&D Center. CERT's mission is to alert the Internet community to vulnerabilities and attacks and to conduct research and training in the areas of computer security, including incident response.

*Answer "Center for Infrastructure Protection" is a distracter and answer "Federal CIO Council", the Federal Chief Information Officers' Council, is the sponsor of FedCIRC.
